SENATOR DOOLITTLE.

He Exacts Money for His Influence.

A SHAMEFUL DISCLOSURE.

The Facts Proved from Doolittle's Own Letters.

Mr. Greeley's Advocate as a Model of Honesty and Reform.

What May Be Expected from the "Liberal Party."

JAMES R. DOOLITTLE, of Wisconsin, is perambulating the country making speeches in the interest of Greeley and Reform. He denounces Gen. Grant for receiving presents, and for the corruptness of his Administration. The documents which we publish below will show this champion of reform in his true light. After these documents are well considered by the public, we venture to say that he will add another to the somewhat numerous "reformers" who, in the brief campaign of sixty days, have been compelled to go into retirement, carrying with them the sweet consciousness that they have practically illustrated in their own careers the kind of reform which might be expected if the Greeley and Brown Republican Democratic sorehead combination could succeed.

We have to add that the letters printed below have been most carefully examined, and that there cannot be a shadow of doubt as to every word being in the handwriting of Mr. Doolittle. They will be photographed, and submitted to public inspection.

The affidavit below explains the story, which is the only introduction needed to the letters:

STATE OF NEW-YORK, CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW-YORK, ss.: Thomas J. Conatty, being duly sworn, deposes and says: I reside and have resided since the Fall of 1863 in New-York City; I was appointed to a clerkship in the office of the Secretary of the Treasury, in Washington, D. C., in 1863; it was in the month of January; I resigned my position there in November, 1864, on account of failing health.

HOW A COTTON PERMIT WAS OBTAINED.

I learned about this time that many gentlemen had obtained permits from the President to trade in cotton in the Southern States; believing it was a favorable opportunity for a large business operation, I applied through influential friends of mine, among whom was Hon. J. R. Doolittle, then United States Senator from Wisconsin, to the President for such a permit; I subsequently obtained the permit to trade in cotton in the States of Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia, Texas and Louisiana; I had not been Senator Doolittle for two or three weeks after obtaining it; I never meditated making Senator Doolittle any offer or consideration for any service he may have done me before or after I obtained it, because I had too exalted an opinion of his character, nor had I any idea he expected any recompense from me up to the time of the following occurrence.

HOW SENATOR DOOLITTLE GOT A QUARTER INTEREST.

Some two or three weeks after I obtained the permit, I met the Senator accidentally in a street-car in Washington, and told him I had obtained it. He congratulated me on the successful termination of the matter. He reflected a little, and said nothing further except to ask me to call at his committee-room in the Senate House next morning. I called the next morning, in accordance with his request. On that occasion he said substantially, "You have a good thing and will make a pile of money, and can afford to be a little generous." I did not know what he meant. He then said to me in substance, "You know I am a poor man, and have not made any money that I have been in public life. I think you can afford to let me share in the proceeds, and be none the poorer." And with this he handed me the letter hereto attached, marked letter No. 1, which he said he had scribbled off, wishing me to copy and send it to him as my own. At the same time he handed me letter No. 2, hereto attached, dated the following day, which he said would be his response to my generous offer contained in letter No. 1. I was too much surprised to make any response. I took these two letters from his office with me to Baltimore, where I then resided. Next day I copied letter marked No. 1, changing the phraseology of one of the sentences referring to myself, that would be indelicate had they come from me. His reply I had already received, as stated above, having retained both letters in my possession. This was substantially all that occurred on that occasion.

HOW THE SENATOR HELPED HIS PARTNER AND HIMSELF.

On the 30th of December I left Washington for New-York City, and received while at the Astor House on or about the 1st of January, through the Post-office, letter No. 3, hereto attached, and accompanying it letter No. 4, also hereto attached, introducing me to Gen. Banks, both in the same inclosure. Gen. Banks was then about to proceed to Louisiana as commander of the Federal forces in the Department of the Gulf, and could have been of essential service in this cotton operation. While I was in New-York I learned that some change had been made in the list of articles which were prohibited from being exchanged for cotton, and I wrote to Senator Doolittle to get for me from the War Department a list of the prohibited articles. In response I received, while still in New-York, letter No. 5 hereto annexed. Subsequently, in the carrying out of this enterprise, I proceeded to New-Orleans, and in the month of May, 1865, presented this letter of introduction to Gen. Banks in New-Orleans. Gen. Banks received me kindly, and after reading the letter handed it back to me, saying: "This might be of some future service to you." I said it might, and took it.

THOMAS J. CONATTY.

Sworn to before me this 10th day of August, 1872. M. M. BUDLONG,

Notary Public New-York City and County.

In presence of Thos. Franklin Smith.

THE LETTERS.

No. 1.

The letter which Doolittle himself wrote for Conatty to send to him—the original in Doolittle's handwriting:

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29, 1864.

Hon. J. R. Doolittle:

DEAR SIR: I have been engaged for a two years past in the Treasury Department, where I have been assiduously at work, early and late, until I seriously feared my health might give way.

In consequence of the confidence which my fidelity there has inspired in the head of the Department, I have received a permit to trade and to purchase cotton to the amount of fifty thousand bales.

This has been freely given me; and now, my dear Sir, allow me to say that during all my stay here I have witnessed on your part in the high position you occupy the same fidelity, and, I may add, such a position and course of conduct, that my heart has been drawn out to you; and, as this permit may enable me to realize a great fortune—too great to be properly administered or enjoyed by any one man—I have determined that, AS A PRESENT ON MY PART, and in the belief that you could better use a portion, should I be successful, than I could use all, I WILL REMIT TO YOU THE ONE-FOURTH PART OF ALL THE PROFITS I may realize over and above all my expenses. I do this in the hope that, while I may become rich in this operation, I may secure to you a competency also.

No. 2.

MR. DOOLITTLE'S GRATEFUL ACCEPTANCE OF A PRESENT.

The following letter is the reply to the above, and was handed to Connatty by Doolittle at the same time:

[Private and Confidential.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30, 1864.

T. G. Conatty, Esq.:

MY DEAR SIR: Your magnanimous proposition, contained in your letter from Baltimore of yesterday, fills my heart with feelings which I cannot express. Such instances of disinterested friendship are so rare, so few among the sons of men are endowed with such a high and noble generosity, that I am without words to tell you how much it affects you [me.]

I have no claims upon you except those of a disinterested friendship sincerely cherished. As to this permit to trade in cotton, you have obtained it without any word or influence or thought of mine, even direct or indirect, for until your communication to me I never had any knowledge or thought even that you contemplated such a thing.

And yet this fact alone, which gives me no claim upon you, is the only possible ground upon which I accept your generous, I will say more, your most magnanimous offer.

Had I aided you in the least, directly or indirectly, in thought, word or deed, I could not have accepted it if I would, and I would not if I could.

I hope you may realize your sanguine expectations, and be able to place yourself, without injury to any other human being, in a condition of pecuniary independence, so that when this fearful war is over you may retire to private life, again to cultivate those literary pursuits you so much love, and which are more precious after all than gold and silver. And should your success be such that in the munificence of your proposition you can enable me to do the same, you will confer a great benefit upon

Your sincere friend, J. R. DOOLITTLE.

Envelope addressed "T. J. Conatty," marked "Private," "J. R. Doolittle, U. S. S."

No. 3.

MR. DOOLITTLE'S PRAYERS FOR A FORTUNE.

[Confidential.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31, 1864.

DEAR SIR: I saw Gen. Banks. He will not leave until Congress meets. He wishes to see Louisiana admitted or the way sure for her admission.

Probably you had not better wait for him.

You can write me fully and freely when you get on to the ground. I will, if you remit to me, purchase bonds for you here or at New-York, according to arrangement. I suppose you wish to make permanent investments of the funds if you realize them.

I send you a letter to Banks. Write, and not only about business, but about the state of things generally. May God bless and prosper you, will be the earnest prayer of

Yours, sincerely, J. R. DOOLITTLE.

T. J. Conatty, Esq.

Envelope addressed "T. J. Conatty, Esq.," marked "Private, Astor House, New-York." Postmarked "Congress, Washington, D. C., Dec. 31."

No. 4.

MR. DOOLITTLE'S VIEWS OF THE PUBLIC WELFARE.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31, 1864.

Major-Gen. N. P. Banks:

MY DEAR SIR: Allow me to introduce to your acquaintance and to your entire confidence Mr. T. J. Conatty, who for the last two years has been assiduously at work in the Treasury Department, so assiduously that his health has been somewhat threatened. He visits New-Orleans upon a matter of great importance, not only to himself but to the public welfare—the reopening practically of the cotton trade. He is a gentleman of high character, and one whom I feel assured you will be glad to know, and, so far as may be compatible with your official duty, to aid in his undertaking. With full faith that we shall overcome the rebellion in the end, and with assurance of my high personal regard for you, I remain, sincerely yours,

J. R. DOOLITTLE.

Addressed "Major-Gen. N. Banks, New-Orleans." Franked and marked in corner "My friend, T. J. Conatty."

No. 5.

T. J. Conatty:

MY DEAR SIR: I saw Dana and Stanton and the Treasury about the list of articles. The War Department made out a list. It was sent to the Treasury. They suggested some alterations. It was sent back to Stanton. It lies still on his table wasted on. I will forward a copy just as soon as possible to you at New-Orleans. Probably the newspapers will contain it.

As ever, yours, J. R. DOOLITTLE.

JAN. 4, 1865.

It will be distinctly understood that all the above letters are in the same handwriting—that of Doolittle himself.

THE PERMIT.

Under the system adopted, the papers known as a permit were as follows: On Nov. 1?, 1864, H. A. Risley, "agent authorized to purchase for the United States products of States declared in insurrection," made a contract with D. P. Moore, T. J. Conatty and William Heinish, comprising the firm of Moore, Conatty & Co., by which the latter agreed to sell to the United States 50,000 bales of cotton, "product of the States of Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi, to be transported by the way of the Mississippi River and its tributaries, and delivered to" an agent of the Government, to be sold, or sent to New-York for sale. After paying expenses, one-fourth of the proceeds were to belong to the United States, and three-fourths to Moore, Conatty & Co. On Jan. 21, 1865, Moore, with the consent of the Government, assigned his interest to Conatty. Coincident with the date of the contract a free conduct was given by Mr. Risley, and also a document of which the following is a copy:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Nov. 17, 1864.

An authorized agent of the Treasury Department having, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, contracted for the cotton above mentioned, and the parties having agreed to sell and deliver the same to such agent—

It is ordered that cotton moving in compliance with and for fulfillment of said contract, and being transported to such agent, or under his direction, shall be free from seizure or detention by any officer of the Government; and commandants of military departments, districts, posts and detachments, naval stations, gun-boats, flotillas and fleets, will observe and obey this order, and give the said Moore, Conatty & Co., their agents and transports, free and unobstructed passage for the purpose of getting said cotton, or any part thereof, through the lines, other than blockaded lines, and safe conduct within our lines while the same is moving in compliance with regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury, and fortifulfillment of said contract with the agent of the Government.

IMPEACHMENT OF BARNARD.

Continuation of Mr. Beach's Argument for the Defense.

A Milder and More Courteous Tone Assumed by Him—New-York Politicians Swarming About the Court Eager to Say a Good Word for the "Fast Judge."

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

SARATOGA, Aug. 14.—The Court opened this morning with the largest attendance of spectators yet. Those, however, who expected a renewal of the indiscriminate assaults made by Mr. Beach, yesterday, were at first disappointed, for the vials of his wrath were emptied then, and the night's rest not only revivified his overtaxed energies, but also restored for a time that better sense of the great responsibility of his position, which he seemed to have lost sight of before, and he spent the earlier part of the day in a serious effort to convince the Court of the truth of his proposition, so solemnly proclaimed in his opening, that his client had been guilty of no crime, and that the errors, if any, committed by him, were nothing more than the results of a mistaken judgment. He took up the articles seriatim, and, with all that legal acumen, seconded by great oratorical power which he is known to possess, he struggled through the hour of the day to do that which his rebutting testimony could not accomplish—to explain away the effect of the evidence for the prosecution. He was courteous to the Court today; courteous even to the opposing counsel, for at one time he condescended to allude to the argument of Mr. Stickney as "pointed and severe;" and in his anxiety to show that the destructive injunctions and receiverships which brought vast corporations to the verge of ruin, and drove great mercantile interests from the State, were justly granted by his client, he forgot for a time the poor scribes of the Press, who were anxiously waiting for some manifestation of his continued regard, nor was there anything to indicate that he cherished even the tenderest remembrance of those whom he referred to as "the dummy managers." Hour after hour, in a sweltering atmosphere, he went on with his self-assumed task, showing a combination of physical and mental endurance seldom to be found; and if the Court would only consent to wear the spectacles which he presented, they might be convinced that the spots on Judge Barnard's record, which appear so plainly to the naked eye of truth, are mere optical illusions.

But this peaceful condition of things was not to continue, for, whether because the probability that the Court would insist on looking with its own eyes and could not be persuaded that black was white, under any circumstances, flashed upon him, or because the opportunity to abuse somebody else was too good to be lost, the aggressive disposition of the speaker showed itself again. Before the session was ended he uttered some very scathing sentences, and looked unutterably fierce, but as everybody knew that what he said was of a piece with the whole defense, which has been conducted on the school-boy principle, that an imputation of mendacity is wiped out by the retort "You're another." Nobody felt angry. He furiously assailed the Bar Association for prosecuting his client, and scowled at the imaginary spies and informers which he said they had employed. He astonished the "mere dummies" with the question, "Oh, you Managers, could you not have spared Judge Barnard?" But before they had time to answer this cruel conundrum, he counseled them severely for not having spared him, and, relentless man, he did not forget the Press in his sweeping denunciations. He made the World tremble and the Tribune hide his head, but the TIMES he knew would "roll its ceaseless course" in spite of him, and so he wisely admitted that, "It is easy for the TIMES to thunder forth its denunciations of this respondent." Of course it could hardly be expected that in all this speech, vituperation the Court would escape unscathed. Nor did it, for Mr. Beach audaciously enlarged upon his expressions of yesterday, with the remark that, "If spies were set upon this Court impeachments would be money." He will consider his argument tomorrow, when Mr. Van Cott will reply.

It will be remembered that an effort was made by certain witnesses for the defense to account for the absence of some papers and documents desired by the prosecution on the theory that the Judiciary Committee had made away with them. Since the case was closed these missing documents have reappeared, but, as will be seen by the following letter from the Fifth-avenue Hotel clerk to Mr. Prince, dated June 8, 1872, the testimony of the letter, that he returned all he could find, receives additional corroboration. It is, however, singular that these documents did not turn up until too late for use in this trial:

FIFTH-AVENUE HOTEL, NEW-YORK, June 8, 1872.

L. Bradford Prince, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: We can't find anything of the missing papers. Nothing of the kind was left in the room you occupied while here.

(Signed.) S. B. CHAFFEE.

A number of New-York politicians and lawyers of doubtful celebrity arrived here this afternoon, with what purpose is not known, but it is suspected to talk for Barnard to any Senator who will lend an ear.

No action will be taken when the arguments are concluded if not before, but an executive session is talked of for the purpose of ascertaining the views of the various members of the Court, and as there seems to be some difference of opinion on certain subjects, it is probable that considerable discussion will be indulged in, occupying perhaps one day. It is said that several of the members are desirous of delivering written opinions, to be published with the sentence when furnished. But this proposition does not seem to meet with general approval.

THE PRESIDENTIAL CANVASS.

Horace Greeley Reaches the Pine Tree State and Speaks Favorably of His Candidate.

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 14.—Mr. Greeley, accompanied by a committee from Portland, left Gorham, N. H., at 11 o'clock this morning. At Bethel, Mr. Greeley appeared on the platform. At South Paris and Mechanics' Falls he was greeted by crowds of people. At Yarmouth he was welcomed with salutes and decorations, and appeared on the platform amid much enthusiasm. At Cumberland Station he was welcomed with cheers by the crowd which had assembled.

The train arrived at Portland promptly at 2:40 P. M. A large crowd was assembled in the depot, and the train entered amid a salvo of artillery, while "Hail to the Chief" was played by the band. Mr. Greeley and party were taken into the reception room, and thence in a carriage to the City Hall, where they arrived at 3¾ P. M. The hall was completely filled. Mr. Greeley ascended the platform, accompanied by the Committee, and was greeted with enthusiastic applause. After music by the band and quiet had been restored, Mr. Greeley was introduced by Hon. L. D. M. Sweet. Mr. Greeley came forward, and was greeted with renewed applause.

Mr. Greeley said: Mr. Chairman, and ladies and gentlemen: It is certainly true that throughout the course of my life so far as I have been connected with public affairs, I have struggled with such capacity as God has given me for the impartial and universal liberty, and for the unity and greatness of our country, and thirdly and last, for peace least when the former end was attained, for early and hearty reconciliation and peace among our countrymen. For these great ends I have struggled, and hope the mass of the third is not demanded.

[The rest of the speech was not received before going to press.]

A Gateway Murder.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 14.—On Saturday night last, three young men, about twenty years old, named Andrew King, John Johnson and [illegible] Howard Johnson, went to the residence of Mrs. Martha E. Blackwood, who kept a small saloon in Scottsville, Sullivan County, and demanded that she should go over to the saloon, and get them some oysters. She refused, whereupon they threatened to kill her, and stated that they had come there for that purpose. She then opened the door, and as she stepped into the doorway, was struck in the temple with a rock and knocked insensible. She died in two hours. King was soon arrested, but the others had not been captured at last accounts. Mrs. Blackwood was connected with some families in Virginia and with prominent people in Sullivan County.

ALABAMA.

Meeting of the Democratic and Liberal State Executive Committee—The Republican State Convention—A Large and Harmonious Body.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 14.—The Republican State Convention assembled in this city at 12 M. today. It is by far the largest and ablest convention which has convened in Alabama since 1860. Several gentlemen of the Convention have but recently joined the Republican Party. One of the Vice-Presidents of the Cincinnati Convention, Thomas Lambert, is a delegate in this Convention. The harmony and enthusiasm of the body is the theme of all men. Not a single jar of discord prevails. The Democratic Reform and the Liberal Republican State Executive Committees of this State, fearing that the work of the Republican Convention would find a prompt response with our people, met each other at Talladega today, in obedience to the call of their respective Chairmen, for the purpose, as they said, of deliberating. It is currently rumored that Jolly, one of the Democratic nominees for Congressman at large, on account of his connection with the Ku-Klux, is to be removed from the Democratic State ticket, to allay the storm of opposition which his nomination aroused in the Conservative ranks. With this it is also rumored that Joseph Hodgeson, Democratic nominee for Superintendent of Public Instruction, is to be removed from the ticket for the same cause. The Daily State Journal of this city has just received the following special from Talladega:

TALLADEGA, Aug. 14.

The State Executive Committee of the Democratic and Conservative Party and Liberal Republican Party met here today. There is some talk of modifying the Democratic and Conservative State Ticket by substituting Jones in place of Col. Joseph Hodgson and Col. J. J. Jolly. It is said the indictments against these candidates are not strong. Liberal Reform and Democracy do not seem to cut here any better than they recently did in Georgia. The Liberal Republicans are decidedly disappointed. Brewer, Doublelas and Warner are here, but they look lonesome.

The following dispatch has also been received at the State Journal office:

TALLADEGA, Aug. 14.

The Liberal Republican Executive Committee, consisting of Messrs. Warner, Hanchet and others, have just adjourned for a week. Their session developed nothing in particular. The Democrats and Conservatives since Executive Committee are harmonious. It is not probable that there will be any change in the State ticket. Messrs. Herndon, Joy and Tolly delivered speeches which were very ultra and bitter. The Liberal Republicans are virtually ignored. Warner is the only one who talks much. The others look lonely.

Gen. R. W. Healy, Chairman of the Republican State Executive Committee, called the Convention to order, and nominated Judge Saffold, of the Supreme Court, as temporary Chairman. On taking the chair, Judge Saffold spoke as follows:

We have not met in Convention to dispense the offices of the State. Without the least assumption of dictation, we wish merely to submit to the people the names of certain of our fellow-citizens whom we think would worthily administer our State Government. With my fellow-citizens, I solemnly protest against the nominations to office made by the recent Democratic State Convention. We fear that mischief is intended to at least one-half of the people, and that in no proper sense do they mean to administer equal and exact justice to all alike. The sudden and unprecedented decampment of a party with scarcely a dissent or demurrer from positions defended through half a century to a situation alongside of those they were combatting, and a substitution of their flag for ours, while they continue the same savage warfare upon us, indicates a purpose as reckless as it is hostile. We appeal to the people of Alabama not to subject us to such domination, obtained in such a way. What may we not fear from partisans who now profess the very same political doctrines for which they heretofore denounced us, while they make such trivial issues with us as only attest their insincerity. Surely we shall have fallen upon evil days when they affect to regard us as the vilest of human beings obtain dominion over us, and in the name of the law may dispose of our lives and fortunes. We declare that we find in our hearts no such feelings of malevolence toward any living soul as our opponents express for us, but we seek only the enjoyment of the full and equal civil and political rights for all the citizens of the State. If we have in some instances employed unfit agencies for the accomplishment of our purposes, our errors in this respect are rather chargeable upon our assailants, whose better precautions have deprived us of the opportunity of selecting our own men in their ranks as well as driven them out of ours. Defeated at all points by invincible justice, they have in the name of liberality, and even of our own cherished republicanism, assailed us as radicals, ultraists, and persons of evil designs. Our deeds acquit us, while theirs condemn them. I see no barrier for greater liberality in the perfect equality which our State Constitution guarantees to every citizen, and no excuse in the laws made for its enforcement. We are charged with intending to obliterate State lines and to consolidate the States of Union, forsooth because we believe that a piece of land, inseparable from the attributes of sovereignty than a human being is to adequate protection from violence. We are said to desire expression of our fellow-citizens because we invoke the aid of the Federal power against armed outlaws. The crime of a single individual has always been held less atrocious than that perpetrated by agreement with others. It would be infinitely more excusable to advocate the repeal of all laws for the punishment of individual offenders, than to give impunity to conspiracy. For better that a penal law should fail into disuse, through want of occasion for its exercise, than that disturbed murder, mutilation and arson should exist without remedy. A more amazing demand was never made on human credulity than when the Democratic Party, in the face of repeated defeats, formally abandoned their own principles at Baltimore as untenable, and adopt ours, and called upon the American people to intrust them with their Administration in order that the Government might be purified of its corruptions. The flames of the conflagration they had lighted for the destruction of the nation has scarcely been extinguished when we are called upon to submit again to their guidance without assurance of their more friendly intentions. A half million of lives and ten thousand millions of dollars worth of property have been a part only of the cost of their mad effort at destruction, and they clamor for reform over the petty pilferings of a few revenue officials. Grant they say has accepted some presents. He has not only done that, but he has paid $100,000,000 of the public debt a year since he has been in office. He has put his relatives in office. It would be more shame to him if he had not, but he has made the currency almost equal to gold, and no money has been lost by robbery. He has appointed some bad men to office, but they have done no great harm, and tranquillity has been preserved at home, while peace has been maintained abroad. How does the account balance? The Democrats will not put their relatives in office; they will put themselves there. They will not appoint bad men to office; the Democrats can by possibility be bad. They will not take pressure; they will only receive rewards for their services. The arrangement they have made is, no doubt, more satisfactory to them than it will be to the American people. While Gen. Grant is President of the United States no measure for paying the national debt will be met by a Democrat proposition to pay the Confederate debt; no resolution will be offered in Congress to nullify the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments; no canals will be formed in Washington to dismember the Union; no State Government will put on the canopy of state the Confederate flag; no Senator will lend his voice to overturn; no vile Ku-Klux will insult the country in nuisance disguise to crucify harmless men and women; the bloody chasm will be filled by tumbling into its frightful depths the Confederacy with all its horrid memories and the whole fourth of the South; no laurel leaf will remain by bad men, who have gone into harmony with the National Union, and be again decorated with its honors, won in glorious service for its preservation and perpetuity.

In order to give the Committee on Credentials full time to make up its report, the Convention adjourned until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. A good State ticket will be selected. Judge Lewis and Ex-Gov. Patton are the only candidates for gubernatorial honors. Alex. White and Ex-Gov. Parsons will probably be nominated for Congress at large. There is great interest manifested by the citizens in the Convention.

THE MAINE CAMPAIGN.

Unanimous Nomination of Mr. Hersey by the Republicans for Congress—Ex-Congressman Rice Claimed as a Greeleyite, Freemason for the Republican Party—Speech of Senator Hamlin.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BANGOR, Me., Aug. 14.—The Republican Fourth Congressional District Convention met here today, and unanimously nominated Gen. Samuel F. Hersey, of this city, for Congress, on the first ballot, the only opposing candidate, Hon. Josiah Crosby, of Dexter, withdrawing in his favor. The Convention was large and enthusiastic. Capt. Isaac Randall, of Island Falls, one of the most prominent men in the last State Legislature, and a leading Republican in this section, presided. Its most notable feature, besides the unanimity of the nomination, was the appearance as a spectator of Hon. John H. Rice, Congressman from this district, immediately preceding Hon. John A. Peters, a pronounced Liberal Republican, who has been repeatedly claimed by the Greeley men as one of their converts, and his reply from the platform in response to calls for a speech from him. This was as follows:

FELLOW REPUBLICANS: I have no sentiments to disguise. I am a Republican today, as I have always been. [Applause.] I have never cast a Democratic vote. I never expect to cast one. [Applause.] I will support the nominee of the Convention today. [Cheers.] And although I understand very well that the most significant vote for Grant will be a vote for Dexter for Governor, I shall vote for him. I know him to be an honest man. There have been some things in the conduct of the Republican Party that has not been satisfactory to me—matters of policy, and, perhaps, of principle. I am free to admit this, but the only thing we can do is to be governed by the common sentiment, the common judgment of the great party with whom we act. [Applause.] I have expressed, and freely, dissatisfaction with the Administration. I hope the day will never come when a man will be prevented from expressing his sentiments of the conduct of his party, within its lines or without. I understand that the significance of this reception. You regard it as a welcoming back of a lost sheep to the Republican Party. [Applause.] I have thought much since the nominations. I have not been satisfied with what I have seen in the Republican Party. I have wanted reform. I may have had some personal feeling, but I have reconsidered all that, and I stand here today without wishing or expecting anything from the Republican Party. I have come to the conclusion that to vote for Horace Greeley is to vote for the Democratic Party, and that I cannot do—[cheers]—and so I shall vote the entire Republican ticket on the 8th of September. I never supposed I had a swallow large enough to take down Marcellus Emery, the Democratic candidate for Congress in this district. I have nothing to say against him personally, but I cannot vote for a man who, if he lives up to his often expressed sentiments and convictions, would, if in Congress, vote for repeating the chasm settled by the war, who would vote for the repayment of rebels for slaves emancipated by the nation, who would vote for pensions to the rebel soldiers. It is not an idle thing to say that the time will come when these questions will again be mooted in Congress, and it is every man's duty to see to it that no man is sent into Congress who might give his votes for these or any other rebel measures. [Applause.] The Democrats have among them smart business men. They are not going to put in ninety-nine hundredths of the capital and let take ninety-nine hundredths of the dividends; and Horace Greeley being a just man is not going to withhold from them their share of the dividends if he is elected. Therefore, I can see no reform through the party supporting him. So far as my influence is concerned I am with the Republican Party. [Cheers.] Your friends are my friends; your faith is my faith; your gods my gods. [Repeated cheers.]

Senator Hamlin being called upon while the regular Committees were out preparing the business for the Convention, made a sterling and vigorous speech. He said: We were today in the midst of a political canvass unequaled in the annals of history, and he hoped that in all the progress of the ages the American people may never see the like. We are told that we should be bound by the sound and Christian maxim set down in Holy Writ, and so we should. We are told that we should follow the prodigal son, who went away from home and became quite as poor and degraded as the Democratic Party is today. The father received that son, but to the reception the boy brought an honest repentance. But the Democrats ask more than forgiveness. We do not read that the father, when he forgave that son put him at the head of his farm. [Applause.] That's what they want us to do. Now we are told that these men have repented. They have done no such thing. Up to last February the Democratic Party had opposed every vital measure which involved the integrity of the Government for the last ten years. He would be pleased to know what single act in evidence of their conversion they have exhibited. Their repentance is a mere declaration of the lip, when they should give the best substantial evidence of honest repentance. He would be one of the first to offer forgiveness; he would clasp hands with no one over the bloody chasm, but when that chasm was filled up with honest repentance and promise of good works, when the chasm had disappeared, then he would clasp hands, and gladly, with the bitterness of them all. [Cheers.]

Gen. Hersey, the nominee of the Convention, made a brief speech accepting the position.

Resolutions indorsing the candidate and reiterating the principals of the Republican Party were reported, and the Convention adjourned.

MR. SUMNER AT HOME.

He Realizes a Startling Change in the People—He Discovers that He is a Senator Without a Constituency—The Shock Practicates Him.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BOSTON, Aug. 14.—Senator Sumner arrived here this morning and went to his old quarters at the Coolidge House. He has been accustomed on his arrival here at the close of a session of labor at Washington to be received with many signs of respect and consideration, and the most prominent men of the State have hastened to congratulate him on his services, and honor him with compliments. Today scarcely a soul of them all was there to meet him, and instead of the distinguished gentlemen who have been wont to crowd his quarters only a beggarly crowd of Greeleyites were on hand. The sudden realization of the terrible change which has come over his relations with the people of Massachusetts and their leaders was too much for his spirits, and to-night he is prostrated and unable to receive any one at his apartments. It is the severest shock which he has ever experienced, and it is exceedingly doubtful whether he can bear up under it. He is not a man without a country, but it is only too apparent that he is a Senator without a constituency.

THE POPE.

Reported Rupture Between His Holiness and Cardinal Antonelli.

LONDON, Aug. 15—6 A. M.—The Daily News has a special dispatch from Florence stating that it is rumored there that Cardinal Antonelli has quarrelled with the Pope, and threatens to resign should the latter persevere in his policy of hostility to the Italian Government, and also that Antonelli requested the clerical journals to refrain from publishing the speeches of the Holy Father.

JAPAN AND CHINA.

Arrival of the Japan at San Francisco—The Revolution in Japan—The Mikado Dressed in a Gold-Braided Foreign Suit.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 14.—The steam-ship Japan, from China and Japan, arrived today. She brought 13,190 packages of tea for New-York, 1,027 for Boston, 588 for Montreal, and 611 for St. Louis. The following passengers arrived on the Japan: For New-York, P. G. Hirsh, Rupert Smith, William Lane, Capt. Percival and J. M. Coulter. For Chicago, H. Muller and child, C. Geerie and two children. For Philadelphia, Mrs. F. H. B. Jenkins. For Europe, De Bien, Antonie Vorel, Marger, Jules Gestral, Albert Jose Mury, daughter, two nephews and servant, and J. Ross.

JAPAN.

The Japan brings the following news:

YOKOHAMA, July 23—Noon.—The Mikado continues his visits to the several shrines at Kioto, his former residence, Osaka and Hiogo, and is now on his way to Nagasaki. He dresses in a foreign style, with an ample supply of gold braid, and has several attendants, who are similarly attired. The natives look with amazement at the changes inaugurated through the late civil war. The country is quiet, and all seem to acquiesce in the present state of affairs. The Mikado is accompanied on his trip by eight men-of-war.

Much comment has been made on the letter from Corea, which has been received by the Mikado. Corea spurns the Japanese demand, and offers to fight at any moment, and even threatens to attack Japan. The letter of the Mikado, on assuming power in Japan to the Corean Government, sending tribute, was sent back scattered with contempt, one of the Ambassadors of Japan was imprisoned, and the other sent back to convey the tidings of the Corean and their contempt for the new rule. The letter of the Mikado was sent three years ago; since which time America attempted to make a treaty with Corea. Foreigners complain that had the Japanese been friendly disposed toward the United States they would have informed the Americans of the state of affairs in Corea, and thus prevented a repetition of America's insolence there. But Japanese pride and Japanese secrecy alike forbade the exercise of candor.

A family of eleven persons were massacred in Yezeo. A little boy, who escaped, testified at the examination by the Government officials, and reconciled police officers as the murderers.

The famine in the railways to Yeddo have been reduced, and the amount of travel has been increased largely.

Tea—A brisk demand has sprung up since the last mail, with advancing rates. Silk—The stock is increasing, and the quality is very good at fully $30 per picul over last year's rates. The settlements have been 750 bales since the last mail. Exchange—On New-York in active demand, at 115, gold; on London, four months, 4s. 8½d.

CHINA.

The steamer Japan brings the following advices from Hong Kong:

The Foochow Oolong market for teas for the United States opened at 21½ to 22 taels for fair to good. Fine teas were not expected in the market for several weeks. The tea crop is generally good. Formosa teas are scarce.

The ships Douglass Castle and Glenartney sailed for New-York with 1,800,000 pounds of tea. The ship Craigforth was loading for the same port.

The American bark Benefactor caught fire. Her cargo, which consisted partly of powder, was removed, and the vessel scuttled.

The United States Squadron in the Thames—Mr. Gurney En Route to the United States.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—The United States steamers Wabash, Brooklyn, and Plymouth have arrived in the Thames, and are anchored at Gravesend. The Wachusett is expected to arrive there before night. All that is known of the future movements of the fleet is that the flag-ship Wabash will soon sail for Norway with Admiral Alden; and the Shenandoah will take Mr. Schenck, the American Minister, to Havre. Right Hon. Russell Gurney and Mr. William H. Smith, M. P., sailed today for America in the steam-ship Moravian. Mr. Gurney returns to resume his seat in the American and British Joint Commission, which meets at Newport next month, and Mr. Smith, the well-known news-dealer of London, will make a tour through Canada and the United States.

THE ALABAMA CLAIMS.

Another Explanation of Mr. Cohen's Appearance Before the Geneva Board—Speech of Mr. Mundella.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—A letter from Mr. Sydney Young states that Lord Tenterden acted him and Mr. Cohen to proceed to Geneva solely to make an explanation of the reports to the Crown on the subject of the American claims for damages by Confederate cruisers, in case any became necessary.

Mr. Mundella addressed a large number of his constituents at Sheffield last night. He spoke of the excellent feeling which had existed between England and America on the subject of the indirect claims, and highly praised the British Government for its course in regard to the Treaty of Washington. He alluded to the attitude assumed by the American Government in terms of warm praise, and congratulated his hearers upon the removal of the differences between the two Governments by the acquiescence of America in the decision of the Tribunal of Arbitration in relation to the indirect claims.

French Inconsistency and Exaggeration—The Success of the Loan—Honors to a Traveler—Dr. Livingstone and Dr. Kirk—The "Incident Saint Hilaire."

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Friday, Aug. 2, 1872.

I am often amused on glancing over my letters which have come back to me after two voyages across the Atlantic, to see how the situation has changed in the recess, and to remark how political hopes have been dashed to the ground by unforeseen events. True it is that "in France nothing is certain but the unforeseen." Consistency is out of the question for you can depend upon nothing—except upon the unexpected, and only M. Thiers and a few men of his age make any pretensions to consistency, or are at all ashamed of the most glaring inconsistency. Gen. Ducrot has furnished an illustration which will remain memorable. When about to cross the Marne this really fine soldier issued a proclamation pledging himself to conquer, and swearing before the army and the country that he would only enter Paris victorious or dead. Gen. Ducrot's army was repulsed, and the next evening the General, safe and sound, was seen upon the boulevards. In reality he did not mean his words to be taken literally. As in the language of Oriental hyperbole a native will gravely tell you that his master has ten thousand elephants and fifty thousand horses and chariots, not to make you believe that this is the exact number, but to give you an idea of the magnificence of his prince. So Gen. Ducrot desired merely to impress upon the public an idea of his own energy, determination and patriotism. Every day such incidents are occurring. Everywhere you hear boasts that the new loan has gone to forty-three milliards, and are regarded as an enemy of France if you timidly suggest that there is some exaggeration in this figure, and that, for all practical purposes, it would be quite enough to say that twenty milliards in actual money had been actually offered to France. Even with the coolest head, one is apt to be led astray at times by so much excitement and enthusiasm, and I desire to say, once for all, that I shall make no effort to be consistent, or make a practice of pointing out inconsistencies. My only aim is to catch the leading ideas of the moment—to cover the most important points of news, and to put on record the spirit of the French public at the exact moment in which I write. To attempt more would be to fill my letters solely with rectifications and apologies. To close the subject, I may say that all this has been suggested by the general belief, a month ago, that the majority of the Assembly had been forced into a compromise which would enable them to hold the President in check. Then M. Thiers kept the Right silent by appealing to their patriotism, because he was negotiating a treaty. Afterward it was Prince Bismarck who had given a word of warning. Then it was the new loan—and in this way the Old Man Wonderful managed to silence all opposition, and to demoralize completely the new party forming against him. The vacation is at hand to prevent any further demonstration for two or three months, and meanwhile, enjoying the sea-breezes and sea-baths at Trouville, M. Thiers will invent some new means for defense.

THE SUCCESS OF THE LOAN.

The journals are still quarrelling with each other over the success of the loan, and each party insists that the other is profoundly saddened and depressed by it. The Bonapartists say that it was due to the immense resources of France in the eighteen years of prosperity given by the Empire, and to the prospect of a bountiful harvest—which is not far from the truth. The Legitimists say that this immense sum was loaned to France to buy back, or to get back, the territory won by Louis XIV. and Louis XV. The Orleanists have a special reason which I cannot well make out, and the Republicans say it is entirely due to confidence in M. Thiers. The other Republicans have a singular reason, yet the Siècle—and several of their organs affirm it boldly. The success of the loan was due, they say, entirely to the spirit of revolution which has driven royalty out of France, and showed the real grandeur of the people. Naturally this class is greatly incensed against M. Goulard for saying that all this money had been loaned to the "Conservative Republic," an expression which the République Française finds both "meaningless and ridiculous." But all save the Bonapartists and Legitimists—who are sensible men and well educated gentlemen, taken as a whole—all but these two parties are united in representing the Germans in a great state of affliction over this wound to their pride, while Prince Bismarck is supposed to be ill with chagrin. I do not know what the Chancellor's feeling may be, I am sure, but I imagine he must rather rejoice than otherwise over the excellent prospect of getting his money.

HONORS TO A TRAVELER.

That is, in reality, all the news of today's budget that is considered of sufficient importance to justify a quarrel among newspaper writers, and, but for the "incident Saint Hilaire," and the American dinner to Mr. Stanley, I might stop just here. That dinner is variously appreciated by those who were present. I was, unfortunately I presume I may say, too indisposed to go out on that evening, but about a hundred members of the American colony were present, and the American Register deems it of sufficient importance to devote a supplement to the affair. Mr. Wasthurne made a speech, recalling the return of non combatus ex asseigo upon the Mississippi Sheriff's writ, for the purpose of showing that this learned official was only a poor devil of an explorer, and that he might have found his man if he had had the energy of a Stanley. Other gentlemen followed in speeches which every American must be proud to read, and then Mr. Stanley gave a long and very interesting account of his adventures, which was most enthusiastically applauded. The only drawbacks to the speech were the Hottentot names constantly recurring, sometimes composed of nothing but consonants, and then all vowels, and all sounding very much as a passage of Homer must sound when read to a costermonger who never heard Greek in his life. However, after a good dinner one can safely go to Gondokoro or Uji for names, and without the slightest fear that they may not be thoroughly understood by every one. The best part of the speech was about the meeting with Dr. Livingstone, which could be given in plain English instead of Hottentot, and this was really affecting. The great traveler's character was pictured in colors as glowing as truthful, and Mr. Stanley seemed never to weary of recounting his virtues. In revenge he attacked Dr. Kirk, and there showed a want of policy which, I fear, will give him no end of trouble in England. It may be all true, but since the letter of Dr. Livingstone's son a strong feeling has arisen in Dr. Kirk's favor, and there is a most excellent principle at the bottom of the British heart which holds that a man must not be condemned unheard. This imprudence is going to detract very much from Mr. Stanley's reception in England, and it will certainly raise a great deal of hostility unless he drops the subject for the present when on the other side of the Channel.

THE "INCIDENT SAINT HILAIRE."

The incident Saint Hilaire is curious and instructive. The usual M. never reply to a letter before reading it. Some years ago a young man in the country suddenly found himself a poet, and proceeded to write a volume. When completed he sent the manuscript to Victor Hugo, proceeding it by a letter of the most flattering nature, and asking the encouragement of the "greatest poet the world had ever produced." Victor Hugo replied in the same strain, and in his own peculiar manner, about which I need not be more explicit, and the young poet was at once raised to fame and fortune in his own estimation, the great poet having approved all his verses, and stated that they were bound to immortalize their author, uphold the rights of man and stamp themselves enduringly upon the perennial tablets of Parnassus. I am not certain about the wording, but I am about "the sentiments," and the poet immediately ceased ordinary work and began another volume. To his great surprise, the post one day brought his manuscript back to him, marked: "Postage refused, on account of non-payment of postage." Victor Hugo had never seen in what colored ink the poems were written. The other day, Barthélemy Saint Hilaire found an address from the newly elected Council of Villefranche among the President's letters, and immediately replied, thanking the Council in the name of M. Thiers, and assuring the gentlemen that the President shared their views completely, and was proud to find that they were of the same opinion. Of course, the Council sent this letter to the nearest Radical paper, and day before yesterday it reached the Assembly. The Duc de Broglie proposed an immediate vote of censure on the President for insulting the Chamber, but remembering M. Barthélemy's habit of writing notes, it was decided to get the assurance first that these were the opinions of M. Thiers. Just in the midst of the tumult, M. Saint-Hilaire sauntered in as cool as a cucumber and as calm as Sunday, and had the obnoxious letter thrust under his nose. Judge of his surprise when he read the following:

"Lean on the nation, Mr. President, and it will support you in a Republican course; satisfy the desires of its desires, and it is obtuseness gratuitous and obliquity lay instruction, restore our misguided brothers to their families, deliver the judicial Bench and the Administration from those fanatical functionaries of the reaction who devote themselves to making the Republic detested, and thus betray your confidence—then you may without fear convoke the people in their electoral colleges to replace that Chamber the majority of which is hostile to you and paralyses your efforts; it will send to you representatives true to the Republic, and who will second your intelligent patriotism."

M. Barthélemy Saint-Hilaire said that he had answered this of his own accord without consulting the President, using the usual forms of courtesy; but he would not believe that this was a true copy until he had sent to the Préfecture for the original. Yesterday the Journal Officiel declared that the address had been answered without reading, and that if it had been read with more attention, the answer would have been in words of the severest blame. "There is no need of reminding the public," it adds, "that M. Barthélemy Saint-Hilaire never abscred in any degree whatever the opinions expressed in a letter which has justly excited general reprobation." This is, by all odds, the best joke of the season, and it has given M. Thiers secretary a lesson he will not speedily forget.

ASHBY.

WEST VIRGINIA.

A Review of Her Political History—Condition of Parties—Ex-Minister Wallace and His Prospects.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARKERSBURG, WEST VA., Wednesday, Aug. 7, 1872.

The political elements of the little State of West Virginia are more agitated today than ever before since it has had an existence in our political history. The history of the Liberal Republican movement that handed the State over to the Democracy is too well known to be repeated here, and I begin the general subject with the declaration that hardly had the new Government warmed the seats of its Executive and legislative offices ere the ruling element of the party, against the better judgment of its ablest men and the universal judgment of its progressive thinkers, set on foot the movement that culminated in the calling of a Constitutional Convention, that in its general organization was a caricature upon the general ability of the Democratic Party of the State. Its general deliberations did little credit to modern ideas and inspirations, although the products of its labors were not fraught with the same baneful consequences that its daily proceedings seemed to have indicated. The disposition to go back a thousand years in the race of life was thwarted by the judgment and foresight of the younger leaven that sweetened the loaf of Bourbonism that called the Convention, and for a time seemed willing to make it the home of rotten ideas and dogmatic inspirations. The result of their labors is to be fought for by the people upon the fourth Thursday of this month. And it is the near approach of that contest that makes this little political pot boil and seethe with such violence.

Besides the new Constitution, which is to be voted for upon that day, all the officers of the State, county, townships and members of Congress are to be elected, which makes the election one of considerable magnitude and importance. But the local issues which are likely to enter into this first canvass can hardly be taken as a criterion as to the result of the national conflict, which is to take place in November. To a proper understanding of the difficulties in the way of a successful contest upon the new Constitution, as that is really the basis of this whole contest, it must be understood that in no State in the Union are there the same conflicting ideas and interests, with as little intelligence, enterprise, liberal ideas, and all that go to make a State worthy of material development, as in this. The Eastern pan-handle, tapering from the Alleghany Mountains, with a base of several hundred miles, until it comes to a point at Harper's Ferry, growing less and less as it progresses, is known as the Second Congressional District of the State. It pays the largest proportion of the State's taxes, and is perhaps the best developed agricultural as well as mineral portion of the State. It has a diversified interest, which is in direct opposition to the manufacturing districts beyond it, having Wheeling as its centre of operations, the basis of the First Congressional District of the State. The Third Congressional District, which takes up the Kanawha Valley, teeming with the most unbounded and remarkable mineral and agricultural wealth, all undeveloped, in the midst of which is situated the little capital of the State, with most means, and at times obstructed, means of approach, has interests that are as antagonistic to the other portions of the State as though they belong to an entirely different Commonwealth. One point especially tender to the people of this district is the capital, which will be unsettled by the adoption of the new Constitution, and will be the reason of their vote against it. The new Constitution differs little from the old, except in the decrease of the officers of the State, counties and townships, and in the revival of the old County Court system and passing the control of the Judiciary from the Republican into the Democratic hands. The land title clause in the new Constitution, of which Col. Ben Wilson, of Harrison County, is the author, is, perhaps, the best argument that can be made in favor of its adoption. This clause gives validity of title to the immense tracts of land that were sold under the Tax-title laws of the old State of Virginia, which have been for a long time in dispute. This will open up to immigration this immense tracts of good farming land, covered with almost boundless forests of immense timber and undeveloped rich mineral resources.

The regular Democratic nominee for Governor, Hon. J. N. Camden, who received his nomination at the Parkersburg Convention, which is claimed to have been the largest ever held in this State is opposed in the contest by Hon. John J. Jacobs, the present and for the past two years Democratic Governor of the State. The Republicans, and quite a number of disaffected Democrats with more or less influence are giving him their energetic support, and almost every day some new acquisition is made to his strength, which will prove dangerous elements to the success of the regular Democratic nominee. Jacobs and all his backers are opposed to the new Constitution, and it is by no means certain that it will ever be the organic law of this State. In the various county, district and other organizations, combinations between the Republicans, who are not sufficient to win the canvass for victory, are being made with disaffected Democrats who have failed to get nominations for offices and are opposed to the adoption of the new Constitution, and in the present situation of affairs party lines are W ry to means disorganization in the stirring battle which is now going on.

Each of the two Gubernatorial candidates are upon the stump, urging their claims before the people with vigorous speeches, and every effort is being made by both parties to win. One peculiar feature of the canvass is the inability of the lawyers who framed the new Constitution to determine the date upon which the election for State and county officers and members of Congress shall be held. The Republicans and likewise Gov. Jacobs' elements of strength contend that the election should take place upon the fourth Thursday in August, at the same time the Constitution is to be voted for; while the other party contend that it should not be until the fourth Thursday in October, the day on which the regular State elections have heretofore been held, while yet another portion contend that it should be upon the day of the national election in November.

The Republicans will hold their nominating conventions for members of Congress, &c., and vote for their candidates upon the fourth Thursday of August. The Democrats had called Congressional nominating conventions in the early part of September, but this new action of the Republicans has awakened the Democratic Party, and they will also have candidates in the field. The principal interest is distant politicians lies in the Congressional contest in the Second District in this State. The old heroes that before the war "ruled the roost" in this locality, are again before the people seeking to take the places they occupied a decade ago, and from which they have been displaced by the operation of the war. Hon. Charles James Faulkner, a member of Congress from 1851 to 1859, is a most prominent candidate for the regular Democratic nomination. He will be remembered for some years as the Chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs, and afterward as Buchanan's Minister to the French Court. He has, as his principal competitors, Hon. Alexander R. Boteler, who defeated him for Congress in a most exciting contest in 1859, while Daniel B. Lucas, son of Wm. Lucas, who was a member of Congress long years ago, desires to test his strength in the nominating Convention. On the opposite side of the question, Col. Ward H. Lamon, well known to the country as the author of the recent life of Lincoln, and a live politician, looms up as a most available candidate, and the question is now being discussed, with a good deal of fervency, by the Republican element, of making no nomination, and supporting the man who will be the most available opponent to Mr. Faulkner in the coming contest. Should this action be taken by the straight Republican Congressional Convention, as it no doubt will be, the fight will be a hot one, and contested without delay or action, Mr. Boteler or Col. Lamon, both of whom are now announced as independent candidates, will make the race against Mr. Faulkner for Congress, with the chances probably in favor of Col. Lamon. Whatever may be the result it is now thought from the combinations being made that the most prominent men in this State for years to come will take place when the question is decided, who is to run, and all the old memories of political junketing will be revived upon the stump by two most able and effective aspirants. Already have caricatures representing Mr. Faulkner's political career in Congress been circulating in the district, and already the elements of opposition have been at work to secure his defeat. Taking it all in all an State's contest presents a more disturbed condition of political elements or a more interesting or exciting canvass than is now going on in the State, and will continue until the contest closes in November. It is important a Governor for one party or the other as that of North Carolina. Senator Tipton or Senator Sharp will soon speak here for the Conservatives, while Speaker Blaine and other forcible Republican orators will be here for the Republican Party.

BOARD OF HEALTH.

Commissioner Barr and Mr. Bergh—Weekly Statistics—Number of Deaths—Sanitary Reports.

The regular weekly session of the Board of Health was held yesterday afternoon. In the absence of President Bosworth, Commissioner Manierre was called to the chair.

Commissioner Gross reported that during the past week 40¾ miles of street-gutters had been disinfected, at an expense of $173 05.

Commissioner Barr called the attention of the Board to a letter of Mr. Henry Bergh, President of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, published in reply to the statement of the Commissioner made at the last meeting of the Board in relation to Mr. Bergh's interference in the Jurant case. Commissioner Barr stated that Mr. Bergh had entirely misstated the case in his communication, and asked whether Mr. Barr owned any stock in the railroads. He (Mr. Barr) would take the occasion to say that he did not own a single share of stock in any railroad company in this City, and he had always done everything in his power to compel these corporations to comply with the orders of the Board in securing the best accommodation for the public.

The Sanitary Committee presented a report of the work of the different bureaus for the week ending Aug. 10, 1872. The City Sanitary Inspector reports a total of 1,618 inspections by the Health Inspectors in the Tenth District. They visited 9 premises where contagious diseases have been found, and have disinfected and fumigated 9 houses, 9 privy sinks, together with clothing, bedding, &c.; 1 case of small-pox was removed to hospital by the ambulance corps, 200 privy sinks and cesspools have been cleaned and disinfected, 79 new connections made under permits of the Board, and 719 loads of night-soil removed from the City. Permits have been granted to 42 vessels to discharge cargoes, on vouchers from the Health Officer of this port.

Dr. Chas. P. Russell, Register of Records, reports as follows:

During the past week there were registered 545 deaths, being a decrease from the previous week of 17, and an excess of 15 over the corresponding week of 1871. Zymotic diseases accounted 207 deaths, constitutional, 104; local, 186; developmental, 38, and violent causes, 38. The fatal cases from small-pox have increased to 12, the highest weekly number registered since the week ending Oct. 28, 1871. The deaths by measles increased from 4 to 11; those by whooping-cough, from 5 to 7; those by typhus fever, from 3 to 4; those by typhoid fever, from 3 to 13, and those by enteric or mesenteric fever, from 6 to 12. The mortality of scarlatina fell from 35 to 21, and that of diphtheria from 14 to 8, and that of diarrheal affections from 38 to 30. There were 10 deaths by intermittent fever—the same number as in the previous week. Phthisis pulmonalis caused 65 deaths, a decrease of 12, and the total respiratory affections a decrease of 6. Puerperal fever killed 1 of a woman, against 4 in the preceding week. 109 deaths occurred in institutions; 38 deaths were certified by coroners, of which 3 were due to suicide, 1 to homicide and 1 to accident. Of the total deaths, 272 were those of children less than 5 years old, being 51 per cent. of the total mortality, and 29 were of persons 70 years old and upward. The coroners held inquests upon 48 bodies found during the week, of which 7 were those of children, they having died from small-pox, and comparatively few from all the other zymotic affections. A singular exception occurs in the case of a woman who died in public hotel, it was furnished as the very large number of deaths due to typhoid fever, which is unusually prevalent, and is not confined to any particular portion of the City.

SHOOTING IN A PALACE-CAR.

A New-York Banker Fires at a Colored Porter.

The Troy Press, Aug. 13, publishes the following report: "Yesterday afternoon, when the Rensselaer and Saratoga train, due here at 5 o'clock, arrived at the depot, considerable excitement was occasioned over the report that a New-York banker had shot a colored porter in drawing-room car Hudson. The particulars of the affair are as follows: Mr. T. F. Jurant, a well-known Wall-street banker, accompanied by his wife and child, came down from Saratoga in the car, and during the passage it was noticed by the passengers that this man, who was under the influence of liquor, abused his wife in a terrible manner. Several of the passengers remonstrated with him, but their talk had no effect. When the train neared the depot one of the passengers who had witnessed his proceedings the entire journey went up to him and told him that he must cease abusing his wife or he would have him arrested. At this point he drew a small revolver from his pocket and pointed it at the head of the passenger. The colored porter, John Washington, who was in one end of the car, witnessed the struggle and hastened to the scene. His approach made Jurant more angry and he seized the porter with the revolver still in his hand. The colored man released him and started for the door. As he was crossing the threshold Jurant fired at him, but luckily the ball missed its aim, passing out the door. The ball in its course came within an inch of hitting Henry Gault, a car-repairer, who was on the platform at the time. Officer Keehan, of station No. 2, who was on duty at the depot, hushed upon the car to investigate the affair. Jurant said he had fired the shot and the officer took him to the station-house. But not before officer Keeler had taken the revolver from the would-be murderer. The prisoner offered Keehan $100 if he would let him go, but Keehan would not be bribed. The officer was enlisted to make the complaint of disorderly conduct, and on such charge he was locked up, but was subsequently bailed by Chamberlain Burdett. A warrant was secured by Washington this morning for assault with intent to kill. On this charge the prisoner will be dealt more severely with. Jurant had on his person a gold watch and $18 in money, which was taken by the police for safe keeping. Mr. Jurant and his child, who were glad to rid themselves of Mr. Jurant's abuse, resumed their journey to the Metropolis. The witnesses state there was no quarrel between him and his wife, and that the pistol was accidentally discharged in the closet of the car.

Mr. Jurant is a banker of considerable celebrity at New-York, and is said to be a millionaire.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

CHARLES SUMNER.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Mr. Greeley's trumpeter and organ, desirous of defending Mr. Lindsay, whom they have so much extolled as "confidential adviser," "bridge over of the Liberal and Democratic Parties," &c., are giving currency to a report that Mr. Lindsay visited Prof. Morse's last illness his mind was impaired so much so that it was found necessary for his counsel to discuss his letters.

Having been invited to an interview with Prof. Morse but a few days preceding his last fatal attack, it is but due to his memory that the facts regarding the publication of Prof. Morse's transactions with Mr. Lindsay be given to the public.

On the occasion of my visit to Prof. Morse, he looked the picture of contentment and health, and his criticisms and remarks on the various topics referred to showed that he had lost none of his mental vigor. After the conversation germane to the interview had been concluded, the Professor urged me to remain, saying that newspaper people seldom visited him, and just at this time he felt inclined to speak of himself and newspapers, and certain matters he was soon to make public, which he desired should be known.

During the conversation he referred to his invention of the electric telegraph, and his assertiveness on this subject was as evident as it was natural. He spoke of the Hartford Publishing Company, and a book they had lately issued, entitled The Industries of America, in which was an article denying his claim to the invention in an elaborate but specious argument. On his writing-table were everywhere evidences of unremitting mental toil, and the matter then in hand was an explicit answer to his detractors, who had had the temerity to deny him his well-earned laurels, notwithstanding the final decisions of the United States Supreme Court. As I was about to take my leave, reference was made to Mr. Lindsay, and the Professor asked if I was acquainted with him. I replied that I was, and that I considered him a courteous, gentlemanly person, who always appeared reliable. "Yes," replied the Professor, "so I learned; so I thought. He appeared to me so respectable and trustworthy that I trusted him entirely and unreservedly, and the result has been disastrous to me." Thereupon the Professor produced his letter-book, and read the identical letter sent by him to Mr. Lindsay, which I copied in Prof. Morse's presence.

Charles W. Morse had nothing to do with the publication of the letter in the TIMES in any way or manner, and Mr. Parsons, Prof. Morse's legal counsel, repeatedly urged his protest against its publication when he found the letter was in my possession. Charles Morse is not a disinherited son, as stated by the Tribune, and the utter fallacy of the conspiracy story is apparent from the fact that Mr. Morse is a life-long Democrat, and will vote for Mr. Greeley if there is no Democrat nominated.

In conclusion, permit me to add a word regarding the "former reporter of the TIMES which that paper will not now probably recognize," alluded to by the Tribune. I was never employed by the NEW-YORK TIMES to write anything. The only paper of which I have ever been employed or sought employment is the Tribune, and that corporation I did serve with satisfaction to its owners from my childhood. Since my retirement I have, at the request of its principal owners, occasionally rendered it good service, and when the responsibility of one undertaking was cunningly evaded by its editor in order that Mr. Greeley could make a treaty offensive and defensive with Mr. Dana. The matter contained in the pamphlet, The Rider Bill, the charges made in which have never been answered, was prepared by the direction of the Tribune, and under its instructions, and was to have been published in a series of articles in that paper. During its preparation, its publication in pamphlet form was suggested, and I fathered the work at the special request of Mr. Greeley, conveyed to me through his political ambassador. But when the advance sheets were ready, they were squeezed like a lemon by the Tribune, and while I was subjected to scurrilous and unfounded attacks from a depraved journal through my compliance with Mr. Greeley's wishes, and after the Tribune had paid the large sum of $60 to hand the publication of the pamphlet, I was even denied the Tribune columns for my defense, notwithstanding Mr. Greeley had, on his way to Washington, told me, in the presence of others, to stay in the City and push the pamphlet, at the same time assuring me that he was at my back—and this when my services in the preparation of the matter were entirely gratuitous.

In proof of these statements I publish the following letters, the originals of which are in my possession:

NEW-YORK TRIBUNE, Dec. 16, 1870.

DEAR COLONEL: I shall be glad to receive the advance sheets you speak of, as soon as they are accessible. The title-page seems to me good, although perhaps defective in not giving a clearer idea of the persons struck. Possibly a sub-head containing something to answer that purpose would be a valuable addition. Very respectfully yours,

(Signed) WHITELAW REID.

One year after my voluntary retirement from the paper I received the following:

NEW-YORK TRIBUNE, March, 31, 1871.

Col. James B. Mix was employed for many years as a City reporter for the Tribune, in which position he displayed real energy and a thorough knowledge of the City. He was born here, and is likely to know as much about the inner life of New-York under the surface. I do not doubt that his experience and knowledge will be found to give him special classes for the work of country correspondence, which he is now undertaking and in which I wish him abundant success. (Signed) WHITELAW REID.

The time came when the Tribune would not have been guilty of injustice, but now it is run by a clique of Kentucky camp-followers, who, indolent and unreliable then as now, kept so far in the rear of Gen. Grant that they could not report his engagements, and who were kept from the officers' commissary chests only by force of arms, it is not surprising that the paper has fallen from its high estate, and is unjust, unreliable, cowardly, and mendacious.

JAMES B. MIX.

The Methodists in New-Orleans.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

An article appeared in the columns of the Sun, Aug. 13, headed "Methodists Disgraced," and addressed to the "Methodists of the United States," by a "Methodist." I wish, with your consent, to correct an error in the following paragraph:

"During the war, and while Gen. Banks was Major-General Commanding the Department of the South, New-Orleans being his head-quarters, Rev. Dr. Newman appeared. At the time of his arrival at the St. Charles Hotel, New-Orleans, I happened to be in the parlor, and was a silent though observant witness of the reception. Evidently his reputation had preceded him. Several of the clergy of his denomination called and welcomed him. A few days subsequently, by military order, the Carondelet-street Methodist Church, the first in point of wealth and influence in the South, was turned over to Rev. Dr. Newman. The old pastor was dispossessed—he and his congregation—upon a military order, and at the instigation of Rev. Dr. Newman. * * * In less than one short month their revered and beloved pastor died of a broken heart."

I wish to state for the information of "a Methodist" certain facts which he should know, the documentary evidence of which it at hand.

The Missionary Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which met in the City of New-York in the Fall of 1862, made an appropriation of money for the "Southern work."

Saturday, Jan. 14, 1864, Bishop Ames and Dr. Harris (now Bishop) arrived in New-Orleans. On the 20th they obtained possession of the churches, by the following order:

HEAD-QUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF, NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 18, 1864.

SPECIAL ORDERS No. 15.—1. In accordance with instructions contained in a letter from the Secretary of War, under date of Nov. 22, 1863, all houses of worship which the Department holds belonging to the "Methodist Episcopal Church South," in which a loyal minister, who has been appointed by a loyal Bishop of said Church, does not officiate, are hereby placed at the disposal of Rev. Bishop Ames.

"Commanding officers of military posts where such houses of worship may be located are directed to extend to the ministers they may be appointed by the Bishop of said Church, the same service in and houses of worship all the aid, countenance and support practicable, in the exercise of their mission.

Signed by order Major-Gen. BANKS.

GEO. S. DRAKE, Assistant-Adjutant-General.

Jan. 21, 1864, Bishop Ames assigned to Carondelet-street Church, J. G. Bass; Felicity Street Church, Chas. Strong; Toulouse-street Church, S. Jones.

All of these churches were without pastors. Rev. J. P. Walker, pastor of Carondelet-street Church, had run away with Gen. Butler and advancing on the city. Services were held in the church once a Sunday by an Episcopalian.

MR. GERRIT SMITH.

Mr. Gerrit Smith has replied to the criticisms leveled at him through the organ of Mr. Greeley, and in the course of his letter he makes the following remark. He is speaking of the Democratic Party:

This infamous party is as much worse than it was four years ago, as its sympathy with and practice of Kukluxism since that time would naturally and necessarily make it. Within these four years Kukluxism has ripened into the most revolting crime the world ever saw; and the Democratic Party, which is the prompter and the very soul of Kukluxism, has ripened into the most depraved party the world ever saw. Within this time thousands of persons, simply because they were not Democrats, have been shot or hung; many dragged from their beds and whipped; not a few of the men mutilated, and not a few of the women suffering the greatest outrage which woman can suffer. Say not that I am wrong in charging all this upon the Democratic Party, Kukluxism is the Democratic Party, and the Democratic Party is Kukluxism. Cheerfully would we all admit to the world's esteem the Democracy of former times. But modern Democracy is hell-born. Abundantly did it prove its origin by its treason in our civil war. Far more abundantly has it proved it by following up that treason, as indeed it was entirely natural and consistent it should do, by so far more foul, and murderous acts of Kukluxism. Who that observes the spirit of the Democratic Party, as it is revealed in its purposes and policies, and especially in its whole Press, does not hold this party responsible for Kukluxism? Who that glances at the solid votes which this party cast, even in the last session of Congress, against all legislation to protect the poor innocent helpless objects of its Kuklux rage, and against the Civil Rights bill also, can fail to identify Democracy with Kukluxism?

I may have been wrong—I probably was wrong—in my willingness in 1848 to help the Democratic Party elect even an old abolitionist. But a very dull scholar should I prove myself to be if, after all that the last four years have taught me of the "oppression, cruelty and murder" of the Kuklux Democratic Party, I should still consent to help that party elect any man—be it even that oldest and worthiest of all abolitionists, William Lloyd Garrison.

Very decisive am I that justice is to be done to woman, and that the land be relieved of its maddening and murderous dramshops. But my first duty is to my colored brothers and sisters. Pronounced opinions have I on many subjects in the realm of political economy. Nevertheless, all these subjects weigh with me but as "the small dust of the balance." so long as I see a great party, encouraged by its disaffected recruits from another party, continuing to strike at the liberty and life of the black man.

It is true that Kukluxism is no longer rampant and defiant. It is quiet now nearly everywhere—but simply because nearly everywhere it is under Grant's iron hand. Let that be withdrawn—and then whether it be Greeley or any other Democratic candidate who shall succeed Grant, the South will again be a hell of horrors. What nonsense, that Greeley will, if elected, change the character of the Democratic Party! That party will change him. It has already changed him. The New-York Tribune has already become a Democratic newspaper. Both it and he are already construed to advocate the Democratic interpretation of "State Rights," and by that interpretation the white man of a State have the right to do what they will with the black man of the State. To support Mr. Greeley is not so much that he will become President, as that by availing themselves of the power of his name over many sleepy and sleazy Republicans and over not a few self-seeking Republicans, the Democrats will be able to obtain a majority in the House of Representatives. A single change in the Senate would do the work. And then our anti-slavery work, with all its cost of treasure and tears and blood, will be undone, and our freedmen be surrendered to their old oppressors.

Black men, be not deceived by this cry for "reconciliation!" Your old oppressors will never be reconciled to you, nor should you be reconciled to them, until they shall have quit the abominable Democratic Party and taken their stand with the Republican Party for all your rights. Oh you Democratic knaves and Republican dupes, who dwell on the duty and delight of "reconciliation" between the Democratic Party and the negro! Some profane interpreters of Scripture wildly say that the only condition on which the lion shall lie down with the lamb" is that the lamb shall be inside of the lion. However that may be, it is not wit but sober truth that the only condition on which the Democratic Party will consent to be reconciled to the negro is that the negro shall surrender all his rights, and accept in their stead such gifts and privileges as the white man shall please to dole out to him.

Nothing is more cruelly and murderously deceptive than this cant about "reconciliation." Heaven forbid that any black man shall be carried away by it! That amiable man Voorhees, I think, has been warned off from Greeley and "reconciliation." As he still cries out against letting the black man vote, we can learn from him what is the Democratic meaning of Greeley and "reconciliation" with the negro.

Black men, be not deceived by this cry that Grant is a Democrat and Greeley a Republican. Grant was never more a Democrat than was many wise and good men, to be brought up in the Democratic Party. But he quit it in time to be your savior and the savior of his country. He is now at the head of the Republican Party—of that party which broke your chains and which stands up for all your rights. On the other hand, Greeley, who was a Republican now at the head of the Democratic Party—of that party which has ever been your enemy; which kept you in slavery as long as it could, and which would rejoice to bring you back into slavery.

Let it not be supposed that, in speaking of the Democratic Party, I include in it all who were once in it. Many have quit it forever, not a few of whom, by the way, have proved themselves to be among the most eminent and useful servants of the country. Gen. Dix sounded the very key-note of the war when he foretolled death to the traitor who should pull down the American flag. Gen. Butler's services in Maryland, New-Orleans, and elsewhere, all in the Judge Orr, of South Carolina, whom, for nearly twenty years, I have felt honored in numbering among my friends, is in his advocacy of Grant and Wilson, setting an example of wisdom, magnanimity and patriotism as happy as it is wide in its influence.

Hail! I am twitting the gratifying news comes up from North Carolina. Very gratifying is it, because:

First—Our success in that State will promote our success in the coming elections in the other States.

Second—From the vote in North Carolina we may safely argue that the black vote of the country will be almost wholly in the Republican Party. Indeed, I have yet to hear a black man say that he will vote against it. It is true I see that two or three such have turned up in the newspapers. Better that those unnatural men—that these worst enemies of their race—had not been born than he guilty (for however temporary a period) of such a crime. Humility is due and such ingratitude to their benefactors. It is true, too, that a few of the black men in the South are asking me, and doubtless other old abolitionists also, to advise them how to vote. The poor fellows are oppressed by a sense of their slavery-begotten and slavery-bred ignorance and incapacity to judge for themselves. Some of them are told by their deceivers that I have come out for Greeley, and this adds to their embarrassment and confusion. My advice to all who so modestly distrust their own judgment is to observe which way the Democrats and their old oppressors vote, for vote they will, and then vote the other way. In this way they will have the superior intelligence of their enemies to guide them. For if the enlightened enemies of the black man vote for Greeley, now plainly does it follow that he should study his own safety in voting against Greeley!

Third—Very gratifying is the vote of the black men for the Republican Party, because it is a grateful and beautiful return to that party for having put them in possession of the right to vote—and for having done this, too, in the face of the determined and incessant opposition of the Democratic Party. Respectfully Yours,

GERRIT SMITH.

Johnson and Greeley Compared.

Hon. E. H. Rollins, in a speech delivered at a mass-meeting of the people of Portsmouth, N. H., said: "We had four years of Buchanan, under whose Administration, in time of peace the nation was dragged down into a most infernal rebellion. Then came four years with Abraham Lincoln as President, and then four years of Andrew Johnson! Following that comes the Administration of President Grant. The country was kept in turmoil by Johnson times because the Executive and Legislative branches of the Government were in antagonism. Can we afford to have four years more of such confusion? (Cries of "No!") Such would be the case if Greeley were to be elected. The financial interests of the country cannot afford to be endangered by four years more of such an administration. Johnson differed from Greeley only by becoming a traitor to his party after election, while Greeley becomes a traitor before. Under no circumstances can the Senate be Democratic for the next four years, and with Greeley as President there would be no harmony. The Senate would be against him, pearing jackanapes upon all his measures, and, as sure as fate, with the election of Greeley we should have four years more of Andrew Johnson."

Coal and Iron in Germany.

The total production of coal in Germany in 1870 was 52,000,000 tons, and 107,322 workmen were employed in getting it out. Of iron ore and iron stone, Germany produced 2,500,000 tons; zinc ore, 500,000 tons; lead ore, 16,000 tons; manganese ore, 11,000 tons; iron pyrites, 75,000 tons; phosphorite, 35,000 tons; rock salt, 2,000,000 tons. The production was raised in 9,422 works by 181,110 workmen. In Bavaria, no fuel but coal is permitted to be burned on the railways. The object is to save the forests from careless destruction.

CAMP TABOR.

Opening Services of the Newark M. E. Conference—A Successful Beginning—The Day's Services.

From Our Own Correspondent.

CAMP TABOR, Tuesday, Aug. 13, 1872.

Today the annual meeting of the Newark and Mount Tabor Methodist Association was formally opened at Denville, N. J. Active preparations have been in progress for some days past, and although a large number of hands were employed, a portion of the new buildings are still unfinished. The grounds belonging to this Association are very spacious, comprising as they do some 120 acres of land, situated on a lovely hillside a short distance east of the town of Denville, known as Camp Tabor. The spot is admirably adapted for its present use, being elevated some several hundred feet above tide-water. It is covered with a forest of over thirty years' growth, and there are quite a number of springs, which yield cool and pure water. The cost of the grounds fall little short of forty thousand dollars. It is laid out in numerous avenues and streets, which are designated by names and numbers, and here a large number of cottages or villa residences have been erected from year to year, so that it somewhat resembles a village in the woods. These houses are finished of very neatly, and outside of many of them the ivy has already commenced to take a firm hold. Inside they are fitted up with every domestic comfort and necessity, and in some instances have the appearance of being city houses, rather than dwellings in the secluded woods. All of them belong to the richer members of the Association, who with their families take up their residence for a few months during the hot months of the year. These grounds differ somewhat to other camping grounds, as almost any article can be purchased at various stores, such as the butcher's, the grocer's, dry goods and other business places. There is, also, a post-office, and last, but not least, a police station, substantially built for the reception of those who may prove disorderly during the camp-meeting. The streets are graded and supplied with gas especially manufactured upon the ground. In addition to the cottages, some five hundred tents have been erected inside of the cottage circle, and in the centre of these is the bethel ground, known as Trinity-place, and here are seats sufficient to accommodate at least eight thousand people. These are let out by the week or month by the Association, as well as apartments in the cottages built by them, at a very moderate sum. The grounds are easily reached by cars on the Delaware and Lackawanna Railroad, by stages, and any other desired method suited to the convenience of the visitors. Although this morning broke open with heavy and threatening clouds, yet, as an early hour a large number were on the different roads leading to the camp grounds. During the morning there were several showers, yet the members continued to flock in, and took in their assigned quarters. For some time everything was in disorder, except with those who had been already upon the grounds, but in a short space all were ready to attend the opening services, and take part in asking a blessing upon the success of the undertaking. The assembly, which numbered several thousand, consisted principally of women and young girls, although there was a fair sprinkling of the sterner stuff. The Association has had very successful meetings, and each year has brought an increase of members and adherents to the Church. The Free Methodists, that is those who are not tied down to the strict rules of the Methodist Episcopal Church, take a prominent part in the meeting, and this body are beginning to take a firm hold in and around the quiet town of Denville. Frequently there has been as many as fifteen thousand people upon the ground at the same time, and, in looking upon the attendance today, and at the opening exercises, there will be no falling off this year, although the Sing Sing and Merrick camp-meetings are now at their highest pitch. Among those who were upon the grounds by invitation were noticed a large number of pastors of the different churches, including Bishop Andrews, Rev. W. B. Corbett, Rev. Father Boehm, an old and much-respected Methodist Minister; Rev. G. Tuttle, the officers of the Association, and a number of the ministers of the Newark Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. [illegible]

The religious exercises will consist of three meetings for the Church each day, together with several prayer-meetings and "experience" services, the preaching commencing at 10½ A. M., 2½ P. M., and 7½ P. M.

In addition to the public prayer-meetings there are minor meetings held in the private tents, attended by those who are invited by the owner. Service formally opened, commenced shortly after 3 o'clock, at which Bishop Andrews, Dr. Foss, Dr. Dashiel and Dr. Eddy took part. The usual prayer was engaged in, followed by the singing of appropriate hymns, such as

"Here in the body pent,
Absent from Him I roam,
Yet mighty pitch my moving tent,
A day's march nearer home."

Earnest and impressive exhortations were given by the clergymen participating in the day's services, and were listened to with every attention by the assembled multitude. They appeared to be utterly oblivious as to what was going on in the outside world, being deeply carried away by the various exercises. Of course there was the usual lamentations, shouts of joy, clapping hands into the air after the manner of the "Perfect Cure," "Perfect Love" and "Perfect Peace," the writhing of hands, and tearful eyes. No camp-meeting would be complete without these appendages, which really form part of the Methodist creed. Smoking is slightly indulged in, though many of the more devout members consider it almost a desecration, yet the Free Methodists claim that they do not indulge in it when service is not being held. Ample provision is made for boarding, there being board-houses and restaurants erected upon the ground, for which accommodation only a reasonable sum is charged.

The meeting will continue for the next ten days.

THE McCABE LUNACY CASE.

Execution Taken to the Validity of the Commitment—A Demurrer Put Aside—Argument on the Case.

Pursuant to adjournment, the case of Miss Rose McCabe, known in her religious order as Sister Mary Stanislaus, was again before Judge Barrett, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday. The lady was present in Court, accompanied by an attendant of the Blackwell's Island Asylum and some lady friends.

Messrs. Smith and Goodwin, representing the firm of Brown, Hall & Vanderpoel, counsel to the Commissioners of Charities, presented to the Court a return on behalf of Commissioner Brown, in which it was set forth that Miss McCabe was held in obedience to a commitment by the Court of Oyer and Terminer, the non-return on the previous day, stated to the Court that the Commissioner had been of opinion that the production of Miss McCabe in Court in response to and accompanied by the original writ and commitment was all that was required.

Mr. John D. Townsend, who appeared on behalf of Miss McCabe, put in a traverse to the return to the writ, in the nature of an excuse to the validity of the commitment, he claiming that it was irregular in form, and further alleging that the petitioner was not insane at the time of commitment, as therein recited. On requiring Miss McCabe to swear to the traverse, he was informed that the rules of her order prohibited her from signing other than the name she had adopted when she entered it. Mr. Townsend thereupon asked the Court for permission to swear to the return himself, which was granted, and the return sworn to and presented to the Court.

Mr. Townsend then asked that he be permitted to argue the question of law involved in the form of the commitment draft.

Mr. McKeon said he would prefer to have the argument stayed over until the following day, and suggested that they go on and take testimony as to the facts raised by the traverse.

After some further discussion, Mr. Townsend asked and received permission from the Court to withdraw his traverse and put in a demurrer to the return, thus raising the issue of law as to the validity of the commitment exclusively, but reserving the right to appeal to the discretion of the Court to allow a traverse to the facts by the testimony should the commitment be held regular in form.

Mr. Townsend then proceeded to present his legal points against the validity of the commitment, leaving it for Mr. Vanderpoel to be heard in favor of it today. He contended that the statute of 1842 was the only statute which prescribed the legal formalities to be observed in committing a party as a lunatic; that under such statute there shall be taken the testimony of two respectable physicians as to the dangerous character of the alleged lunatic either to himself or the person or property of others; that such testimony shall be taken in writing and filed in the office of the County Clerk; and such testimony, accompanied by a record of all proceedings in the case, certified under the seal of the County Clerk, shall alone authorize the admission of the alleged lunatic to an asylum. The law as it was, if carried out according to its exact terms, can endanger the liberty of no one; but in the case no such observance has been had.

Mr. John McKeon, in support of the validity of the commitment, referred to certain sections of the Revised Statutes authorizing two Justices of the peace upon their own personal knowledge, and by the law of 1860 the authority of the two Justices was conferred on one Justice.

The provisions of the law of 1842, referred to by Mr. Townsend, were found in the act authorizing the establishment of the Utica Lunatic Asylum, and referred exclusively to that State institution. William C. Verplanck, in preparing directions for for the Bloomingdale Asylum, of which in his lifetime he was a manager or director, studiously avoided any reference to the act of 1842, thus conveying the impression that, in his judgment, the provisions of that act did not apply to the Institution. This Mr. McKeon respectfully submitted to the Court, was the reasonable and proper construction of the different laws on this subject, and, under such interpretation, the commitment in this case should be sustained.

The case was then ordered to stand over until 11 o'clock today, when Mr. Vanderpoel will be heard on behalf of the Commissioners, Miss McCabe being in the meantime remanded to the custody of the officers of the Asylum.

TUESDAY'S STORM.

Its Severity in the Hudson River Counties—Freaks of the Lightning.

From Our Own Correspondent.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Wednesday, Aug. 14, 1872.

The Associated Press report but briefly referred to the terrific thunder-storm which burst over this city last evening. The lightning was of the most fearful nature, and appalled the stoutest hearts. The oldest inhabitant does not remember its equal. The day had been excessively hot, and the atmosphere unusually sultry. The storm clouds had lain along the mountains all day, gathering strength hourly, till at nightfall they moved up the horizon. At times streaks of chain-lightning fringed the lower edge of the inky-black mass, and lighted up the river for ten or fifteen miles. Then the broad and less vivid flashes of heat-lightning followed, accompanied by sounds of deep, heavy thunder far off. At 7:20 P. M., the storm, reaching north, south and west, as far as the eye could see, moved up solidly, and burst over the city. No wind or any consequence accompanied it, but the rain fell in torrents. The lightning flashed from horizon to horizon incessantly, in forked tongues and jagged chains, and it really seemed as if every flash struck something, because they were instantaneously followed by rattling and stunning reports of thunder. Looking up Main-street from the Post-office, balls of fire were seen rolling into the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph office, and explosion after explosion followed, like the rattle of musketry, as the electric fluid struck the telegraph instruments, creating terror in the hearts of everybody in the vicinity.

At the Western Union Telegraph office a ball of fire entered the window and exploded on the desk of the operator, and was followed by other electric explosions, driving the operators away from their business.

Down at the depot the effect was also startling. In the telegraph office there, Superintendent J. M. Toomey, of the Hudson River Railroad, and Robert Wilkinson were seated at the instrument, and the operator was working during the storm, because of the washing away of a culvert near Catskill, making telegraphing necessary. While they were busily engaged there came a blinding flash of lightning, and at the same instant a ball of fire dropped from the Poughkeepsie and Eastern Railroad wire, and exploded on the desk between Mr. Toomey and Mr. Wilkinson. Both were affected, Mr. Wilkinson's ears and fingers tingling with electricity. Further work ceased at once till the storm subsided. The engineer of the down train witnessed fearful scenes, coming along the railroad while his train was in motion; streaks of lightning chased each other around his engine, over it, and down upon the railroad track, shooting far ahead of the advancing train, gilding the rails with vivid hues. Along the railroad telegraph poles, in every direction, were shivered by the lightning.

The Mary Powell landed her passengers here while the storm was in progress.

Capt. Anderson took hold of the bell-wire to ring the engineer's bell, when he received a shock that came near knocking him down. The mate Fox, the Western Union operator here, touched one of the brass thumb-screws on his instrument, when he too received a shock which for a time paralyzed his arm.

Strange to say not a building in this city was struck, nor was any one injured! The storm lasted nearly an hour, and the lightning was of a vivid pale green, violet and crimson.

The people generally were much alarmed.

Meeting of the Board of Apportionment.

The Board of Apportionment met yesterday, the Mayor in the chair, Controller Green offered the following resolution:

That the sum of $10,000 be appropriated on County account, unto the New-York Society for the Relief of the Ruptured and Crippled, to be applied to the support of every crippled child received and retained within hospital, at the rate of $150 each per annum, and a proportionate sum for a shorter period, being in accordance with an act of the Legislature of the State of New-York, chapter 386, Laws of 1872, entitled "An act relating to the New-York Society for the Relief of the Ruptured and Crippled," and in addition thereto, and a transfer from the appropriation of "Extra Contingencies." Adopted.

The following were adopted:

Whereas, Owing to the suspension of the Guardian Savings Bank, the amount deposited therein by a former Public Administrator, A. J. Rogers, received from intestate estates, is for the present unavailable to the parties entitled thereto; and

Whereas, Parties representing these intestate estates are calling for the sums due them;

Resolved, That the sum of $10,000 be appropriated to enable the Public Administrator to provide for the payment of moneys due sundry estates, and that amount be transferred from account of "Extra Contingencies."

Prisoners Appealing for Release.

Counselor Hummel yesterday moved, before Judge Barrett, in Supreme Court, Chambers, for the discharge of James Brennan, who was a witness in the Stokes case, and is still detained as a witness against Justus Dunn. It was explained that Dunn had been convicted and sent to the State Prison, and Brennan was discharged by the Court.

Counselor Hummel also applied for the discharge of a boy named Henry Walters, who pleaded guilty to a charge of petit larceny, and was sent to the school ship. Counsel claimed that the boy was not guilty, and presented an affidavit of Michael Dooley, the alleged complainant, that he had never made a sworn complaint. Counsel contended that he should not receive testimony dehors the regular record, and discharging the writ, remanded the prisoner.

On application for the discharge of Orange H. Stevens, who, it is claimed, received money from Kate Woods by representing himself to be George Harvey, a brother of Henry Harvey, of the Erie office, Judge Barrett granted the application on the ground that Stevens was committed without a particle of evidence of the offense charged.

Not Going, but Gone.

The St. Louis Globe says: "'I am not going over to the Democrats,' said Schurz but a few weeks ago. And yet he went in North Carolina and supported the straight Democratic ticket there. In that State there was no pretense of Democratic fusion with 'Liberals.' It was a simple issue between Republicans and Democrats, every candidate of the latter being an old Democrat. The Greeley support of the North Carolina Democracy is significant. Compare it with the Greeley and Schurz cool support of the Republicans in the Connecticut election. There it was 'as plain as a pikestaff' that they wanted the Democrats to 'vote straight' yet they denied it. Now, it is no pioneer that they yearned for Democratic victory in the old North State, and they have forgotten to deny it, and have engaged in the fight for it. Mr. Schurz cannot help himself; he has gone over to the Democrats."

A Strange Case.

The New-Haven, Conn., Journal & Courier of Aug. 13, says a young man named Bernard Foster, well known in town, entered a complaint at the police office, on Monday, against Rev. Dr. Carmody, of the St. John's Roman Catholic Church, charging the pastor with being abusive language toward him in a sermon on Sunday, in his address to the congregation. He alleges that the doctor called him a blackguard and his wife a bad character, and that he advised the members of the congregation to shun him, and if they saw him coming to cross to the other side of the street and avoid him. It is stated that Foster has procured counsel and despite to proceed with his complaint and bring an issue in Court.

Bitten from Hydrophobia.

James Roye, aged ten, of No. 404 East Eighteenth-street, was bitten by a dog in April last. The wound healed rapidly, and nothing more was thought of it until Sunday night, when symptoms of hydrophobia made their appearance. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital on Monday, and although every effort was made to save his life he died in great agony yesterday. Coroner Keenan was requested to hold an inquest.

REGULAR REPUBLICAN NOMINATIONS.

FOR PRESIDENT,

ULYSSES S. GRANT,

OF ILLINOIS.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT,

HENRY WILSON,

OF MASSACHUSETTS.

"Gen. Grant never has been defeated, and he never will be."—HORACE GREELEY.

"While asserting the right of every Republican to his untrammeled choice of a candidate for next President until a nomination is made, I venture to suggest that Gen. Grant will be far better qualified for that momentous trust in 1873 than he was in 1868."—HORACE GREELEY, Speech on 8th January, 1871.

Amusements This Evening.

OLYMPIC THEATRE.—A LIFE'S DREAM—SENSATION, &c. Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Lingard.

WOOD'S MUSEUM.—DRAMATIC PERFORMANCE AND CURIOSITIES.—Afternoon and evening.

CENTRAL PARK GARDEN.—SUMMER NIGHT CONCERT under direction of Theo. Thomas.

SPECIAL CAMPAIGN SUPPLEMENT.

We beg to announce that the first of a series of CAMPAIGN EDITIONS of the TIMES is now ready. It is printed in large, clear type, and is by far the best document for Republicans issued from the Press.

We desire to call the particular attention of Republicans in all parts of the country to this paper. It has been prepared with the greatest care, and is adapted to readers in every State of the Union. It is issued at a price which barely covers the cost of paper and printing—namely, a cent and a half a copy in quantities of not less than a hundred, or two cents for each single copy.

It contains—

1. A list of the Tammany supporters and allies of Horace Greeley, with facts proving the alliance between them.
2. A clear and concise statement of the results of Democratic rule in New-York City.
3. A collection of Mr. Greeley's writings and sayings concerning the South and the rebellion—showing how he encouraged the South to secede by telling it that there was no power to compel it to remain in the Union; and how, afterward, he cried out for the extermination of Southerners and the wholesale spoliation of their lands.
4. Jake Thompson's letter.
5. Extracts from speeches of Mr. Colfax and Judge Stanley Matthews.
6. William Lloyd Garrison's very able letter to Senator Sumner—one of the most effective arguments on the Republican side which the campaign has produced.
7. A compact and lucid exhibit of Gen. Grant's Financial, Indian and Foreign policy.
8. A record of Gen. Grant's opinions on all questions of public interest, compiled from his own Messages and other documents—affording a striking contrast to the wild and uncertain crochets of Horace Greeley.
9. A statement of Mr. Greeley's erratic theories on financial questions generally.
10. An interesting sketch of Gen. Grant's achievements during the war, showing the great services he rendered to the country while Mr. Greeley was clamoring for peace at any price.
11. The letters of Gen. Dix and Speaker Blaine.
12. An article exhibiting the effect of Grant's policy on the commercial, ship-building and financial interests of the country.
13. Photographs of Greeley's friends, by Greeley himself, including pictures of Augustus Schell, Belmont, Trumbull, Doolittle, S. S. Cox, Fernando Wood, John Cochrane, Frank Blair, Horatio Seymour, and the Brooks's.
14. A compilation from Mr. Greeley's writings of his opinions of Gen. Grant.

In addition to the above, the paper contains several special articles of great interest and value to all true Republicans, and to honest men of both parties, who regard with disgust the present infamous coalition between the worst class of Democrats and renegade Republicans.

We shall print 250,000 copies of this edition to start with. Orders should be forwarded without delay to this office.

Price $1 50 per hundred, or $15 per thousand. Single copies, 2 cents each.

Readers out of the City, desiring one or more copies, can have them mailed direct. Price 4 cents each, including postage.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES,
New-York City.

The Grand Jury were discharged yesterday, without having brought an indictment against any editor of this paper, notwithstanding all the assertions of the Tribune and other papers to the contrary. These assertions were one and all utterly false. Mr. GREELEY's paper, having tried to "bully" the Grand Jury, after the style of a Tombs lawyer addressing a nervous Magistrate, now insults them by saying that the "editor's" influence was too strong for them. It is, perhaps, needless to say that the editors of this paper do not know any gentleman connected with the Grand Jury, have no influence to exercise in any quarter, and would not exercise it if they had. It has also been stated that "efforts" have been made to stop the Kilpatrick suit. If any such efforts have been made, they have proceeded solely from KILPATRICK's friends, and perhaps the less they have to say on the subject the better it may be for their principal. It may be as well for them to allow the case to take its course, should it be brought forward in any other form, without publishing falsehoods about it on the one hand, or trying to bully juries and Judges on the other. The course which KILPATRICK's friends have lately been pursuing, through the Greeley papers, is not calculated to promote his interests in any way.

Mr. NAST has drawn a very clever sketch this week of GREELEY's temporary successor, commonly known as Mr. Jefferson Brick, the "Professor of Journalism." In this little sketch, Prof. Brick is represented with two heads on one body—a body clad in flashy and vulgar apparel. The Professor is on one side industriously whitewashing HORATIO SEYMOUR, because he has a label in his hand setting forth that he is for Mr. GREELEY. On the other side, Prof. J. B. is spurting mud over Gen. DIX, because it appears from a paper under the General's arm that he is for GRANT. This, like most of Mr. NAST's sketches, derives its chief force from its truth and justice. According to Mr. GREELEY's organ nowadays, every man is an unmitigated rascal who refuses to support H. G. As for the Professor, (who is to be superseded by Mr. THEODORE TILTON when the present campaign is over,) it is said that he feels flattered at being caricatured by anybody; but no man not bred in the Fenton school of morals would be very proud of NAST's tribute to his character.

What may be the merits of LINDSAY's case we do not know and do not care—but if he expects to escape a trial by setting the Herald and other Greeley papers to cry out that his prosecution is part of a political conspiracy, he may as well make up his mind to find himself deceived. The family of the late Prof. MORSE stands too well in the public estimation for any decent man to believe that they have entered into a conspiracy. It is a very nice excuse indeed for a man like LINDSAY, when accused of betraying a trust, to allege that he is prosecuted because he supports GREELEY. If every rascal who "supports GREELEY" in this City is to set up that excuse, we may as well admit that justice is in a worse plight than ever in this City. If LINDSAY has cheated Prof. MORSE's family, he ought to be punished, and not be allowed to sneak behind GREELEY, whose white coat furnishes at present a sort of sanctuary for thieves. We repeat, that we are in absolute ignorance of LINDSAY's case, and we should have thought that common discretion on his part would have induced him to keep us in that state of ignorance until he is brought to trial. However, as he will have it that we are in a "conspiracy" against him, we will try to find out who and what he is, because we find it rather awkward to conspire against a person of whose very existence we were scarcely aware. Why any human being should think it worth while to "persecute" LINDSAY we know not—the question he has to answer is, has he conspired against and cheated Prof. MORSE and his family? And that is a question which ought to be settled in a Court of law, not in newspapers.

GERRIT SMITH explains in another column the reasons why he regards the Democratic Party as unsafe for the negroes, as well as for the country at large. It is a manly, sensible and straight-forward declaration, and makes short work of the "cant about 'reconciliation.'" No man in this country has shown himself a firmer and more unselfish friend to the negro race than GERRIT SMITH. His words will, therefore, be listened to by them, and they are full of practical wisdom for all.

Senator Doolittle.

JAMES R. DOOLITTLE was Senator from the State of Wisconsin from 1857 to 1869. In the language of the Tribune, he "joined the Republican Party late in the canvass of 1856, after he had become satisfied that it could not fail to carry Wisconsin, and was chosen United States Senator a few months thereafter." When near the end of his second term, he became "quite aware that he must look to new affiliations for office." He consequently deserted the Republican Party, and refused to obey the resolution instructing him to vote for the Civil Rights bill, which was passed by the unanimous vote of every Republican in the Legislature of Wisconsin. From that time he remained in private life, save as he occasionally emerged to make Democratic speeches in Connecticut and other States, where the Republican majority was invariably increased, till in 1871, when having, in the language of the ex-organ, "sank into a mere office-seeker," he "accepted a grudging nomination for Governor of Wisconsin, with a platform as shuffling and hesitating as himself," and was "easily beaten and comfortably forgotten." With the first public appearance of the Liberal-Republican-Democratic combination, he reappeared with a scent as unerring as that of a vulture when carrion lies below. He was made Chairman of the recent Democratic National Convention "as a compliment to the Liberal Republicans of the country," as the Tribune phrases it, though why the selection of an apostate Republican "office-seeker" should be a compliment to any one we do not pretend to understand. After the Convention he came to this City to officially announce to Mr. GREELEY his nomination, and has since been making speeches in North Carolina and Maine as the chief Greeley orator. In these speeches, he has not only been severe upon the corruption of Gen. GRANT's Administration, but his virtuous soul has been tortured by the reception of presents by an officer of the Government, while he made a vehement attack upon Mr. A. T. STEWART for venturing to think of accepting a position under the Administration. In short, Mr. DOOLITTLE has "done" the prudishness if not the piety for "the combination."

The documents which we publish in another column will show what the virtuous Mr. DOOLITTLE knows practically about present-taking and corruption, and how good an expert he is in such matters. The story which they unfold is briefly this. In the Winter of 1864, one T. J. CONATTY, a clerk in the Treasury Department, and a former resident of Wisconsin, obtained from Mr. LINCOLN a permit to buy fifty thousand bales of cotton within the rebel lines. These permits were at that time much sought after, and, as the estimates then ran, a permit for fifty thousand bales was considered to open the way to a profit of from a million to a million and a half of dollars. In procuring this permit, Mr. CONATTY had, among other things, the valuable assistance of Mr. JAMES R. DOOLITTLE, then Senator from Wisconsin and member of the Committee on Military Affairs in the United States Senate. The permit was granted about the middle of November, 1864.

Mr. CONATTY did not see Mr. DOOLITTLE for some weeks thereafter, but meeting him late in December, he told him of his good luck. Mr. DOOLITTLE, after a moment's reflection, requested him to come to his Committee room at the Capitol, and, on calling, Mr. CONATTY was astonished to hear this pure-minded champion of reform address him, in substance, as follows: "You have a good thing, and will make a pile of money, and can afford to be a little generous. You know I am a poor man, and have not made any money since I have been in public life. I think you can afford to let me share in the proceeds, and be none the poorer." While Mr. CONATTY was trying to recover his breath at this astounding proposition, Mr. DOOLITTLE, proceeding to business with the air of an expert in such matters, handed to him a letter which he "had scribbled off." This letter was one which our virtuous reformer desired Mr. CONATTY to copy, sign, and send to him. In it Mr. DOOLITTLE makes CONATTY assure him, DOOLITTLE, that, having "witnessed on your part, in the high position you occupy, the same fidelity, and, I may add, such a position and course of conduct that my heart has been drawn out to you, and as this permit may enable me to realize a great fortune, too great to be properly administered or enjoyed by any one man, I have determined that, AS A PRESENT on my part, and in the belief that you could better use a portion, should I be successful, than I could use all, I will remit to you the one-fourth of all the profits I may realize over and above all my expenses. I do this in the hope that while I may become rich in this operation, I may secure to you a competency also." Mr. DOOLITTLE next produced, to the still dumbfoundered CONATTY, his reply to the letter he had so kindly prepared for CONATTY to send him. This reply of the Wisconsin Senator is so gushing with gratitude, purity, and piety, that we cannot attempt to epitomize it, but give it in full, to show in what manner a pure-minded reformer accepts a present of a quarter to a third of a million of dollars, which he is compelling an humble clerk to give him. It may be of service to less exalted "strikers":

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30, 1864.

T. J. Conatty, Esq.:

MY DEAR SIR: Your magnanimous proposition, contained in your letter from Baltimore, of yesterday, fills my heart with feelings which I cannot express. Such instances of disinterested friendship are so rare, so few among the sons of men are endowed with such a high and noble generosity, that I am without words to tell you how much it affects you [me.] I have no claims upon you except those of disinterested friendship sincerely cherished. As to this permit to trade in cotton, you have obtained it without any word or influence or thought of mine, even, direct or indirect, for until your communication to me I never had any knowledge or thought even that you contemplated such a thing. And yet this fact alone, which gives me no claim upon you, is the only possible ground upon which I accept your generous, I will say more, your most magnanimous offer. Had I aided you in the least, directly or indirectly, in thought, word or deed, I could not have accepted it it I would, and would not if I could.

I hope you may realize your sanguine expectations, and be able to place yourself without injury to any other human being in a condition of pecuniary independence, so that when this fearful war is over you may retire to private life, again to cultivate those literary pursuits you so much love, and which are more precious after all than gold or silver. And should your success be such that, in the munificence of your proposition, you can enable me to do the same, you will confer a great benefit upon your sincere friend. J. R. DOOLITTLE.

Here we find the champion of purity and reform, the denouncer of present-taking and corruption, then a Senator of the United States, proposing to an humble clerk whom he had assisted, that the clerk should make him a present of a share in the prize he had obtained, then writing a letter for the clerk to address him, in which he (the Senator) is beslavered with praise, and then the same Senator accepts the compulsory present in a letter as full of falsehoods as of pretended purity.

We do not wonder that the humble clerk was dumbfoundered, but we do wonder that the shrewd and grasping Senator should have allowed CONATTY to take away with him these two letters. But he did precisely that, and these two original letters, like the three others hereafter referred to, are now in our possession, written entirely in the well-known handwriting of JAMES R. DOOLITTLE. Science will aid us to give to the world the means of judging of their genuineness.

After a night of reflection, Mr. CONATTY did as Mr. DOOLITTLE desired. He copied the letter so kindly prepared for him, making a few trifling alterations, and sent it to the Senator.

We must do Mr. DOOLITTLE the justice to say that from that time certainly, quickened by gratitude and self-interest, he set vigorously to work to assist Mr. CONATTY in realizing a fortune on their joint account. The latter having gone to New-York, Mr. DOOLITTLE, on Dec. 31, wrote him there, inclosing a letter of introduction to Gen. BANKS, who was then just starting to assume command at New-Orleans. In the private letter accompanying it, he hurries Mr. CONATTY off to the scene of their joint fortunes, and desires to be kept fully posted. He also kindly offers to invest for his partner the golden harvest as fast as it is gathered, and until it is fully gathered he adds:

"May God bless and preserve you, will be the earnest prayer of

Yours sincerely, J. R. DOOLITTLE."

The letter of introduction to Gen. BANKS is indorsed on the envelope, "J. R. DOOLITTLE, U. S. S." and in the corner, "My friend, T. J. CONATTY." In this letter the doughty warrior is assured that Mr. CONATTY visits New-Orleans upon a matter of great importance, not only to himself but "to the public welfare, the reopening, practically, of the cotton trade." Mr. DOOLITTLE seems to think that the public welfare and that of J. R. DOOLITTLE are synonymous, and this is, perhaps, the charitable way of accounting for his recent career. The series of letters closes with one dated Jan. 4, which shows that Senator DOOLITTLE continued to "do little chores" for the partnership, for he went to various departments to see what goods could be exchanged for the cotton which was to bring the huge fortune as well to the humble clerk CONATTY as to the pure Senator DOOLITTLE.

We repeat that all these letters are in our possession, with their envelopes—such of them as were sent by mail bearing the postmarks and the frank of the Senator. The letters are wholly in his handwriting, and do not need the affidavit of Mr. CONATTY to prove their genuineness, but they are corroborated by his statement. We invite a careful reading of all the documents. To those who read them, comment is wholly unnecessary. As for Mr. DOOLITTLE, it would be fortunate for him if he could be in the future what Mr. GREELEY said he was in 1871—"comfortably forgotten." His fate casts a lurid light upon the character of the "reformers" who are too pure for Gen. GRANT's Administration, and who fly for relief to GREELEY, TWEED, and FENTON.

A Transformation.

That Mr. GREELEY should assume the character of a mild and benevolent old gentleman, chastened by affliction, and full of sentiment, piety, and other pleasing qualities, is certainly rather astonishing to those who have known him up to the time of his nomination by the Democratic Party. As a politician and an editor, he has notoriously been one of the bitterest of partisans, and in the use of vigorous and vindictive language in denouncing those who differed from him, he has been unsurpassed. And now, during his tour through New-England, he has suddenly become the most amiable and tolerant of men. Those who once recognized that there was "no fiercer wild-fowl" than your HORACE GREELEY, now find him roaring as softly as the gentlest of sucking-doves. Judging from his speeches delivered during the last few days, he is not only an improved sort of Scriptural patriarch, but he combines with his new-born reverence for religion and tolerance for all men, a poetic sentimentality that closely reminds one of LAWRENCE STERNE. No mere sudden conversion is on record since that of the persecuting Saul. Indeed, the difference between the Saul who argued against the Christians with stones and clubs, and the Paul who is the pattern of the Christian apostle, is hardly greater than that between GREELEY, the Radical journalist, and GREELEY, the poetic patriarch of today.

In proof thereof it is only necessary to read any one of his recent speeches. For example, he said at Berlin, on Tuesday: "I have learned respect for other men's opinions." Now, it was only a little while ago that he insisted that DAVID A. WELLS, who differed from him in opinion on political economy, was, therefore, a traitor, bribed with British gold; that Gov. SEYMOUR, who differed from him as to the manner of conducting the war for the Union, was, consequently, a liar; that Mr. BRYANT, who did not altogether believe in protection, was, hence, not only a liar, but a villain; and, only last week, his journal insisted that Gen. DIX was a mercenary coward, GERRIT SMITH a humbug, and GARRISON an abusive radical. Now he has learned respect for these gentlemen's opinions, and mildly intimates that they "have sought to serve their country by other means than he would have chosen." After this, we may expect that he will at once invite all his political opponents to meet him in New-Hampshire with a view to paddling in any practicable brae, and picking the casual gowans in company, while Mr. GREELEY himself leads in singing "Auld Lang Syne," and SEYMOUR, WELLS, GARRISON and SMITH join with him in the chorus.

Not only is Mr. GREELEY thus overflowing with Christian charity toward everybody, but he is also permeated with poetic sentiment, even to the extremity of his wonderful boots and his patriarchal hair. "I have felt," he says, "the sting of adversity, and feel respect for defeat as I have felt the bitterness of defeat." Let us drop the tear of sensibility over this touching confession, while the recording angel blots out his interminable list of GREELEY's oaths, in admiration of this Christian spirit of resignation and forgiveness, expressed with so much pathos. "I have not controlled events," he further remarks, speaking as though he were a new sort of NAPOLEON, discoursing in a New-Hampshire St. Helena to a Yankee O'MEARA—but "events have controlled me." It was not Mr. GREELEY who denounced and vilified SEWARD, and WEED, and RAYMOND, and every one who did not listen to his insatiate demands for office. It was "events" which did this dirty work. Just at the present time, the "events" which control him are COCHRANE and FENTON. It is a pity that he did not more particularly indicate the events which, for the last thirty years, have forced this meek and excellent old man to conduct himself like a scolding fishwife.

A nomination for the Presidency has achieved wonders, but never before has it transferred a quarrelsome, vindictive, profane and abusive politician into a simple-minded, charitable and pious old gentleman, whose only pleasure it is to see old ladies reading their Bibles in cottage doors, and who would be shocked to think that any one could be guilty of the wickedness of casting doubt upon the sincerity and honesty of men who differed from him in opinion.

The Harnard Impeachment.

The impeachment trial at Saratoga is drawing to a close, and we hear that extraordinary efforts are being made by the friends of Judge BARNARD, assisted by the scoundrels who have so long profited by his maladministration of justice, to effect his acquittal, or, if they cannot succeed in that, to secure a verdict of simple removal from the Bench, without the stigma of disqualification for holding office in the future. The crowd of BARNARD's retainers, who have infested the Court-room and the lobbies of the hotels in Saratoga during the trial, are industriously trying to convey the impression that the prosecution has been a "failure"—trusting to the ignorance of their backers, and their inattention to the details of the trial, to gain credence for their falsehood. The truth is, there never was a prosecution more successful so far as proving the charges is concerned; and, if Judge BARNARD's friends, including, it may be, some members of the Court, imagine that in the turmoil of the political canvass, the public have lost sight of the impeachment trial at Saratoga, or have ceased to take any interest in the result, they will find themselves greatly mistaken.

The fact that the Press, yielding to the solicitations of the defendant and his counsel, has refrained from all attempts to prejudge BARNARD's case during the trial, must not be construed into any lack of interest in the case, much less into indifference with regard to the result. The truth is that, in this vicinity, where the judicial career of Judge BARNARD is so well known, and his utter unfitness for the Bench is so universally admitted both by friend and foe, no one has for an instant dreamed of the possibility of his being acquitted by the Court that is now called on to pass judgment upon him. His instant removal from the Bench has been everywhere regarded as a foregone conclusion. Even his most unscrupulous political and personal friends did not venture to ask for his retention in office, after the damaging proofs of misconduct and malfeasance had been brought to light by the Bar Association. It will be recollected that when BARNARD's case was pending before the Judiciary Committee of the Assembly, Messrs. FIELDS and JACOBS offered, on behalf of the Democratic side of the House, to secure a unanimous vote for his removal, provided the Committee would report in favor of that method of getting rid of him, rather than by the more serious and significant method of impeachment. If full justice could have been done to his crimes by simply removing him from office, that could have been effected four months ago; but the Committee were of the opinion that his case demanded a more signal punishment, both as an example to those who might be tempted to follow his example, and in vindication of the law he had so corruptly administered, and of the Bench he had so long disgraced. Hence it was that they refused to consent to any other mode of dealing with him other than that of the highest and gravest form known to the Constitution—trial by impeachment.

Now, as every one knows, the very essence of impeachment—that which distinguishes it from all other methods of punishing judicial corruption—lies in the power of the Court to disqualify the guilty party from holding any office of trust in the future. Any verdict short of this that shall be rendered by the Court now sitting in Judge BARNARD's case, will not only fail to meet the expectations of the public, but will be entirely inadequate, as a penalty, to the overwhelming proofs of his guilt. We are loth to give credence to the rumors that come to us of improper influences being brought to bear upon the High Court of Impeachment to secure a mitigation of BARNARD's penalty; but any member of the Court who votes either to retain him on the Bench, or to permit him, under any circumstances, ever to aspire to that honor in the future, need not be surprised if he finds himself subjected, thereafter, to the most damaging imputations.

Dr. Livingstone.

The learned societies of England are considerably puzzled over the letters received from Dr. LIVINGSTONE. The traveler appears to have sent no news, and when his letters were opened, they were found to contain nothing but querulous complaints. The letters published in the Herald only thicken the mystery. It is not only their wonderful style which attracts attention, but the very unmissionary-like character of the Doctor's remarks concerning women, &c. The Saturday Review very naturally says:

"It is not stated whether the letters published by the New-York Herald are in LIVINGSTONE's own handwriting, or whether they were dictated by him to Mr. STANLEY. It would seem that LIVINGSTONE had profited by his residence in the heart of Africa to acquire a considerable familiarity with American literature and slang, and to hit off the racy, sub-erotic flavor of the New-York Herald with conspicuous success. * * * He is quite gushing about 'the dears' and 'bussies,' with their 'charming black eyes,' 'nicely-rounded limbs,' and 'fine, warm brown skins' tattooed all over. Casembe's Queen would, we are assured, be esteemed a real beauty either in London, Paris, or New-York, notwithstanding the hole she has drilled in the tip of her 'fine, slightly aquiline nose.'"

The Spectator suggests a thought which must have occurred to many minds, namely, that the good old Doctor is no longer in his right mind. The Spectator remarks of the Herald letters:

"They are full also of complaints, principally directed against Dr. KIRK, who, we imagine, will completely clear himself, and are written with an uneasy, or, to speak plainly, a vulgar jocularity as foreign to the great traveler's character as it is possible to conceive. Dr. LIVINGSTONE writing about chiefs 'bulbous below the waist,' and describing black girls as 'dears' and 'bussies' who adorn themselves by 'filing their splendid teeth to points like cats' teeth,' but who are 'very sisterish,' and quoting Punch, and parodying LOWELL, and comparing the faces of Zanzibar slaves to 'London door-knockers, which some atrocious iron-founder thought were like those of lions,' is not the Dr. LIVINGSTONE we have all known."

There is a mystery about these letters still to be cleared up, but the fact remains that Mr. STANLEY found LIVINGSTONE when expedition after expedition had failed, and he raked his life in the attempt. In fact, life must have been about the last thing he thought of when he plunged into Africa in quest of the great traveler—about as hopeless and hare-brained an undertaking, to all appearance, as ever human being entered upon. The resources of the British Government had been tried, and they broke down. A newspaper correspondent from a distant part of the world stepped in and performed a work which had been practically abandoned. "Wonderful," people cry out. It only shows how much better newspapers are served than Governments; how much more vigor, energy, and heartiness newspapers can draw from their servants than even the greatest of Governments can extract from theirs.

We may add that we hear from a good source that Dr. LIVINGSTONE is so disgusted with the neglect he believes he has received from his own countrymen, that he intends, upon leaving Africa, to come out to this country and settle and be naturalized. This is his own statement, made in a private letter. This should be quite enough to satisfy Mr. STANLEY.

A New Delight of Travel.

Most people like to be as comfortable as possible in traveling, and the different styles of railway carriage in vogue in different countries are doubtless devised, with a view to that end. But to the American traveler, fresh from the ease and manifold conveniences, almost luxury, of our Pulman or drawing-room cars, it is difficult to understand the persistency with which the foreign mind clings to that pattern of railway vehicle known to us here as the English compartment carriage. The seclusion at which it aims, and which is its only apparent recommendation, it by no means affords; and daily experience shows that the hapless wayfarer entrapped in it is constantly exposed to fearful chances of battle, murder, and sudden death. For an adventurous spirit, indeed, a ride in one of these compartment carriages should have a wonderful fascination. Locked in from all communication with the outer world, he will find unsurpassed facilities for being robbed and murdered, or the hardly less thrilling excitement of being black-mailed, and perhaps arrested, at the hands of unscrupulous beauty. If he escapes these greater dangers, he is at least subjected to the minor pleasure of being involved in a free fight, at imminent risk of a broken head, and with the certainty of being given in charge to the police, if he attempts to escape from his undesirable position.

At least, so it chanced to a luckless gentleman riding not long since from London to Brighton. In the same compartment with him he found three other gentlemen, one of whom, soon after starting, found it necessary to relieve his overcharged spirits by howling and behaving in a very animated manner. To this another objected in what the noisy passenger took to be offensive language. From words the two speedily came to blows, and spent a large part of the rest of the journey in thumping one another vigorously, and in tumbling over their peaceable fellow-passengers. One of the latter finally, having had his fill of this sort of entertainment, ventured to stop the train, (that being the only means of summoning relief,) by pulling a cord in such case made and provided. The combatants were taken into custody, and with them the unfortunate peace-maker, "on a charge of making use of the communicator without sufficient cause." The charge in his case was indeed dismissed, but the delay and notoriety he suffered may well deter him from a repetition of the rash experiment.

The lesson, apparently, is, that when gentlemen traveling in a compartment take it into their heads to fight, they are to be allowed to indulge in that amusement until the train stops, or they give out from exhaustion, and that the only resource of their fellow-passengers is either to combine and beat the belligerents into quiet, or eject them through the windows. What is to justify a passenger in using the "communicator" does not appear; probably nothing short of murder or fire. When to these advantages of the compartment are added a score of inconveniences and discomforts which would not be tolerated one moment by our own traveling public, it certainly seems odd that American improvements in railway transit have not been more generally adopted abroad.

The Honest "Party."

The question of who is who and what is what in regard to Mr. GREELEY's supporters is becoming serious. Here we have the charmingly naïf and simple-hearted child of politics, Gen. BANKS, saying to an "interviewing" reporter that he will soon go to Maine to make speeches in favor of the "Liberal Republican cause," and again in the same interview, he is reported as speaking of the "Liberal Republican Party." What is this Liberal Republican cause, this Liberal Republican Party? Gen. BANKS leaves us in doubt what he is going to do; for he tells us that he is going to support GREELEY and BROWN. But on what pretense can he connect their names with the Republican Party, or set them up as the champions of the Republican cause? They are not the nominees of the Republican Party, or even of any organized faction of it. Perhaps he thinks to help the matter by the qualification "Liberal," but it is difficult to see how. The only political importance of Messrs. GREELEY and BROWN is that they are the nominees of the Baltimore Democratic Convention. Does Gen. BANKS mean that their liberality is so great that they are willing to accept the votes of those who detest them, and who are "using them for temporary purposes," if they can but attain their personal ends thereby? So it would seem. This is no mere dispute about name—it touches the essence of this question. Let Gen. BANKS go into Maine, like an honest man, and say to the people there: "I have come to ask you to support the nomination of the Democratic Party—that party which encouraged the rebellious South all through the war. I have come to ask you to help that party to use Mr. GREELEY for temporary purposes." This would be manly; not particularly so—only decently right and fair. Let Gen. BANKS try it in Maine. Many people would be curious to know the result.

MINOR TOPICS.

Mr. GREELEY has brought confusion and grief into the councils of COCHRANE and FENTON. He was strictly forbidden to write letters, and yet no sooner has he left town, and escaped from the supervision of COCHRANE, that he immediately writes a letter to a "friend in Washington," giving a list of the States which he hopes to carry. Not intending this letter for publication, Mr. GREELEY did not think it worth while to pretend that he had any hope of carrying Pennsylvania, and so, therefore, omitted that State from his list. This letter, however, gets into print, and COCHRANE and FENTON, and Fenton's young man, are made miserable by their candidate's indiscretion. They have been insisting that they were certain of Pennsylvania, and now Mr. GREELEY puts them to shame by admitting that he has no expectation whatever of carrying it. COCHRANE had better lock his candidate up at once. So long as he is at liberty he will speak and write, and, unless he is kept in close confinement, he will ruin whatever chances he now has of carrying even a single State before next November.

While we have been devoting our attention to PLANTAMOUR's mythical comet, the sun has seized the opportunity to indulge in conduct which cannot be commended. Signor TACCHINI, an Italian astronomer, has detected him in the act of clothing himself in the vapor of magnesium. Furthermore, we learn, on the same authority, that the sun's surface is covered with "granulations,"—the result, perhaps, of intemperance in the absorption of meteors. What is to be the consequence of this highly reprehensible proceeding, Signor TACCHINI cannot predict. He is, however, clear that when the sun disguises himself with magnesium clouds, and exhibits a granulated countenance, there is reason to apprehend mischief. Either he will proceed to scorch us with unbearable heat, or will freeze us with unexpected cold. At all events, the matter ought to be looked into, and an investigating committee of astronomers should give it their immediate attention.

President JUAREZ was buried in the same cemetery where lies the body of Ex-President MIRAMON, shot by his orders at Queretaro. It is worth noticing that JUAREZ, who had doomed so many men to sudden death, died at last almost as suddenly as though he had been shot by a vindictive bullet. MAXAMILIAN, the brilliant, reckless MIRAMON; VIDAWOR, the ablest Mexican General of the present generation, and MEJIA, the grim Indian, who remained faithful to the Emperor when men of better reputation betrayed him, were only a few of the victims whose death warrant JUAREZ signed. Whatever may be said in favor of JUAREZ, however much his energy, patriotism, and indomitable will may be praised, he was certainly as merciless as the most vindictive Indian of the Plains. His successor is evidently a very different sort of man, for his first act has been to grant an amnesty to all but two of the adherents of the fallen Empire.

Passengers by the railway-trains running through Westchester County are in no little peril from the stones which lawless boys amuse themselves by hurling at the trains. The same practice is indulged in by the boys who collect toward evening on the East River piers, and who assiduously stone the boats of the East River Ferry Company. So far, no one has been seriously injured, but in many instances the windows of the Westchester railway-trains have been broken, and the passengers put in imminent danger of their lives. Now, there must be some way of identifying these young scoundrels, and making an example of a few of them. Throwing a stone at a railway passenger-car is certainly a murderous assault, and should be punished as such. The railway companies should offer a large reward for the arrest of the villains, and the police of the county should carry it. It is rather hard that travelers should be permitted to undergo daily danger and violence at the hands of unpunished ruffians.

Now that the theatres are about to open for the Fall and Winter season, with all sorts of additions and improvements, it may not be amiss to call the attention of managers to a usage long-established abroad, and which might profitably be introduced here. We refer to the half-price system of European theatres, whereby, after a certain period of the performance, the rates of admission are reduced. A similar plan here would work, we are sure, for the benefit of managers and public alike. Many people would drop in for the concluding acts of a play or opera at half rates, who would be unwilling to pay full prices for that partial pleasure. There is, besides, no insignificant class who would be reduced by the very prospect of getting in for less than their neighbors. The usual charge for an orchestra stall in our first-class theatres is a dollar and a half. Many persons would be unwilling to pay so much to see only a part of the performance, who would yet cheerfully pay seventy-five cents, or even a dollar. The question, after all, is purely one of business advantage. If the system has been found to work well abroad, there seems no good reason why it should not work equally well here. Very few theatres are ever completely filled, and it is for managers to decide whether it is more profitable to keep seats unoccupied throughout the evening, on a chance of getting full rates, or to sell them for part of the evening at a lower price. At all events, the experiment we should think would be worth trying.

A society has recently been organized at Cork, Ireland, which, if successful, is calculated to be of lasting benefit to the industrial classes of that city. At the present time, the houses in which mechanics and laborers are obliged to live are probably worse than any we have in New-York; and it is with the view of making a very great improvement in this direction that the society referred to has been established. It is not intended, however, that the movement shall be altogether of a philanthropic nature. The promoters, who, including the Mayor, are nearly all public men, have subscribed a certain sum, which is to be used for purchasing land and building houses to be let to poor families at the same rent they now pay for inferior apartments. After allowing to the subscribers five per cent. on the amount of their subscriptions, the balance is to go into a permanent fund, to be drawn from at certain intervals for the purpose of increasing the number of buildings. It will be always proper, as a matter of course, for charitably disposed persons to add to this fund by bequest, although the managers have not yet thought it necessary to provide for such a contingency. So far, the work of the society must be regarded as purely experimental, and the result will be looked forward to with no little interest.

Illinois.

A correspondent writes from Springfield, Ill., Aug. 8, 1872:

How about New-York in the fall this Fall? Illinois is good for 55,000 majority for Grant. We are going to give these Liberals the biggest "set back" any set of traitors ever experienced. Our party rejoice over the news from North Carolina. We have built a big wigwam, and have it filled to overflowing three times a week. Our people are determined to win. The old spirit of 1860 has returned. Don't believe any Liberal lies about reduced majority. It's all a game of brag. We don't propose to turn this country over yet awhile to rebels and Copperheads. This is the opinion of all quiet, thinking and reliable people in this community. We have hundreds of Republicans in this section who have not voted for several years that will turn out this Fall. We are entirely confident of an overwhelming success. Yours, A.

"Point wherever you will to an election district which you will pronounce morally rotten—given up as a great part to debauchery and vice, whose voters subsist mainly by begging, stealing, keeping houses, prostitution, and dealing in infamy—and that district will be found voting a large majority for the Democratic Party."

Very well. Where is the Wood-chopper of Chappaqua to obtain his vote if it be not in these same "rotten districts?" He is a Republican, he says. Do Republicans look into such sloughs as he here describes for their support? Not to our knowledge. Could Greeley blush, he would change to crimson when he reflects upon the character of the company he keeps, as described by his own pen.

The Republicans of Monroe County held their Convention at Rochester on Monday of this week to appoint delegates to the State Convention at Utica. Over 150 delegates from the different towns and wards answered to their names and took part in the proceedings. The peculiar feature of the Convention was seen in its selection of its presiding officer. Theodore Bacon, Esq. Mr. Bacon, on assuming the duties of the chair, made a stirring speech, which was received with the greatest satisfaction. One of its opening passages ran as follows:

"I believe some of you know that I was one of those hundreds of thousands of men who moved forward to the action of the Cincinnati Convention with enthusiastic hope, and that I have, as much as any part to dishonesty and vice, whose voters subsist mainly by begging, keeping houses, gambling houses, prostitution, and dealing in infamy—and that district will be found voting a large majority for the Democratic Party."

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

There was quite a numerous attendance at the Exchange yesterday, Wednesday, Aug. 14, and the following real estate was sold at public auction:—By E. P. Fairchild, by order of the Supreme Court, in foreclosure, under the direction of Sidney Ward, Esq., referee, thirteen three-story and basement brick houses, in an unfinished condition, and lots, situate and commencing on the north side of Forty-third-street, 275 feet east of Ninth-avenue, and terminating 100 feet east of Ninth-avenue. They were sold separately subject to a pro rata proportion of a third mortgage which covers the whole property and amounts to $96,000 75, such mortgage being held by the North American Life Insurance Company, who were the plaintiffs in the suit. The same premises also had, a few months ago, a second mortgage amounting to $6,000 cash. The whole property realized in the aggregate the sum of $75,092 72, which is sufficient to pay off the first mortgage and 43½ per cent of the whole amount of the second mortgage. The particulars in detail will be found below.

The same gentleman also sold, by order of the Supreme Court, under the direction of John E. Fellows, Esq., referee, the following property belonging to the estate of Morris Gernecke, deceased:

The three-story and basement brick house and lot, 17.10 by 34.9, situate on the north side of Thirty-fifth-street, about 175 feet west of Eighth-avenue, to E. P. Fairchild, for $7,000; also, the two-story and basement brick house and lot, 22 by 55, situate on the City of Brooklyn, E. D., on the south side of South Third-street, 149 feet west of Second-street, for $2,600; also, adjourned the sale of the residence located in Richmond County, Staten Island, and belonging to the same estate, to Wednesday, Aug. 28.

Joseph McGuire also sold, by order of the Supreme Court, under the direction of Abel Crook, Esq., referee, the triangular gore of land having no frontage, but commencing on the north side of One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street, 200 feet west of First-avenue, 100.11 by 118 by 152.4½, to John McGowan, for $4,000.

A. J. Bleecker, Son & Co. also sold, by order of Paul M. Spofford, 416,044 acres of land, located in the north-eastern counties of Kentucky, to William Myers, for $9,300.

The following sales are advertised to be sold at public auction today, Thursday, Aug. 15:

By Muller, Wilkins & Co., at the Exchange, adjourned sale of the lot and buildings situate on the east side of Eighth-avenue, 30 feet north of Thirtieth-street, by order of Lewis C. Lewis, referee.

By A. J. Bleecker, Son & Co., on the ground, nineteen plots of land located at Far Rockaway, Long Island.

J. Libby & Co., bearing date the 8th day of April, 1871, and recorded in the office of the Clerk of the County of Bergen, in the Book of Mortgages, Liber 5, and clear from all encumbrances of said mortgage, and free and clear from any and all other encumbrances, said estate being all those two certain lots, tracts or parcels of land, with the buildings thereon erected, and the machinery thereon or therein, whether the same be fixed or movable, which premises are situated in the Township of Lodi, in the County of Bergen and State of New-Jersey, and are bounded and described as follows, to wit:

The first lot beginning in the south-western corner thereof, at a point in the easterly line of a street of forty feet in width running along the westerly line of said lot; from thence running (1) north forty-four degrees and forty-two minutes east, three hundred and fifty-seven feet and five-tenths of a foot along the said street; thence (2) south forty-six degrees and thirty minutes east, two hundred and eighteen feet and five-tenths of a foot; thence (3) south forty-four degrees and forty-two minutes west, three hundred and fifty-seven feet five-tenths of a foot; thence (4) north forty-four degrees and thirty minutes west, two hundred and eighteen feet and five-tenths of a foot along the line of a street to the point of beginning, containing one acre and one-eighth, more or less, bounded northerly, easterly and southerly by other lands of said Robert Rennie, and westerly by said street.

The second lot, commencing in the south-easterly corner thereof, at a point in the centre of the public road leading from Paramus to Acquackanock; from thence running (1) north sixty-four degrees and thirty-nine minutes west, one hundred and ninety-three rods and four-tenths of a rod; thence (2) north twenty-two degrees and forty-one minutes east, seventy-two feet and three-tenths of a foot; thence (3) north sixty-five degrees and forty-three minutes west, one hundred and twenty-five feet and 7-tenths of a foot; thence (4) north thirteen degrees and fifty-nine minutes west, one hundred and eighty-six feet to the centre of the Saddle River Brook, then returning to the place of beginning; from thence running through the centre of said public road (5) north eighteen degrees and fifty-eight minutes east, four hundred and fifty-four feet and five-tenths of a foot; thence (6) east through the centre of said road, north twenty-two degrees and forty-eight minutes east, three hundred and fifty-four feet and eight-tenths of a foot; thence (7) north thirty-seven degrees and twenty minutes west, to the centre of the Saddle River Brook; thence down said Brook through the centre of said brook, the several courses and distances thereof to the end of the fourth course.

Bounded southerly by other lands of said Robert Rennie, known as the Old Chemical Works; westerly by the middle of said Saddle River Brook; northerly by other lands of said Robert Rennie, and easterly by the centre of said public road. Also, all the buildings and erections upon said lot, with all machinery, boilers, engines, shafting, copper rollers, and other apparatus used in printing, bleaching, dyeing and engraving. Also the dam and all the water-rights and privileges connected therewith, or appurtenant thereto, to be held and enjoyed, accepted and with the privilege of entering upon lands of said Robert Rennie, adjacent to said dam and water-rights, for the purpose of cleansing, repairing and rebuilding the same.

Excepting and reserving to the said Robert Rennie, his heirs and assigns, a right of way over the lands taken and occupied by the railroad-track leading from the Lodi branch of the Hackensack and New-York Railroad to the Lodi Chemical Works, said track is now laid down and located, with free leave and liberty at all times to pass and repass in, by and upon said premises, with carts, wagons, etc., also the right to enter and repair said track with workmen and laborers.—Dated this 6th day of August, 1872. SAMUEL PLUMMER, United States Marshal.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, WASHINGTON, June 28, 1872.

GENERAL ORDERS NO. 58.—THE following is an extract from section 1 of the act making appropriations for the support of the army for the year ending June 30, 1873, and for other purposes, approved June 10, 1872:

"For manufacture of arms at the national armory, one hundred and fifty thousand dollars: Provided, That no part of this appropriation shall be expended until a new model for a breech-loading system for muskets and rifles shall have been adopted for the military service, upon the recommendation of the Board to be appointed by the Secretary of War, which Board shall consist of the Chief of Ordnance, the Chief of the Ordnance Department, one Ordnance officer, and three officers of the Army, one to be taken from the Cavalry, one from the Infantry, and one from the Artillery, and the model for a breech-loading system, which so adopted, shall be the only one to be used in the Ordnance Department in the manufacture of muskets and carbines for the military service; and no payment shall be made from the Ordnance Bureau of the United States for the use of said system, to any of its officers or employees, or for any patent in which said officers or employees may be directly or indirectly interested."

In conformity with the above provisions, a Board will assemble at the City of New-York on the 21 day of September, 1872, with authority to adjourn as circumstances may require in order to avail itself of the services of such persons as officers who are hereby placed at its disposal, to consider and recommend for adoption a breech-loading system for muskets and carbines for the military service.

The following officers compose the Board:

Brigadier-General A. H. TERRY, U. S. Army.
Colonel F. V. HAGNER, Ordnance Department.
Colonel J. A. CHAPIN, 16th Infantry.
Major M. A. MCALLISTER, 7th Cavalry.
Captain J. L. KIZIRIAN, 2d Artillery.
2d Lieutenant HENRY METCALFE, Ordnance Department, is detailed as recorder of the Board.

All persons interested in small arms are invited to submit samples and appear in person, under such rules as may be adopted by the Board.

The Ordnance Bureau will supply such information bearing on the matter as may be called for by the Board.

By order of the Secretary of War.

E. D. TOWNSEND, Adjutant-General.

THE INDIANA AND ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILWAY COMPANY'S

First Mortgage 7 Per Cent. SINKING FUND GOLD BONDS, FREE OF GOVERNMENT TAX.

An East and West Air Line of 152 Miles, Indianapolis, Ind., to Decatur, Ill.

This road passes through a part of the best settled and richest agricultural and mineral country of Indiana and Illinois, averaging thirty miles in width with no other East and West railway built or projected through it. It crosses in Paris and Vermilion Counties, the rich of Indiana, which alone will supply an ample business.

BLOCK COAL FIELD

Thirty miles through Douglass County, Illinois, just completed, opens and pays for Whole Western Division Mortgage, amounts to Decatur, negotiable miles to be finished in 1872. Grading and ties and materials (except iron) already secured; bridge over Wabash ready for superstructure.

Eastern Division, sixty-seven miles, partly graded, and to be finished in 1873.

$1,800,000 IN CASH ALREADY EXPENDED ON THIS ROAD, AND $1,800,000 REMAINING TO BE CALLED FROM TWENTY SUBSCRIBERS, AMONG WHOM ARE W. H. GUION, SIDNEY DILLON, JAY COOKE & CO., CLARK, DODGE & CO., E. D. MORGAN, VISSCHER, WOOTS & CO., AND PAUL S. FORBES, OF NEW-YORK; HENRY S. BATES, OF BOSTON; HENRY LEWIS, OF PHILADELPHIA, AND G. S. PULLMAN, OF CHICAGO.

Besides its right of way, the Company owns 23,000 acres of land, chiefly in Illinois, of which 2,000 acres are in the Coal Fields of Douglass Co., Ill., and the SUBSCRIPTIONS IN BONDS AND CASH from counties, towns and individuals of $700,000.

The road connects at both termini with the most important RAILWAY SYSTEMS of the West, and being by many miles shorter than any other line, will be indispensable to them, while its local business alone will insure good dividends on its stock.

Bonds $1,000 each, payable in Union Trust Company, Trustee or bearer, July 1, 1902, in gold coin. Coupons, also in gold, payable Jan. 1 and July 1, in New-York City, at the Union Bank of London, at first exchange of £ sterling.

SINKING FUND of 2½ per cent. a year on gross earnings to be invested by Trustee in Bonds at not exceeding par.

THE AMERICAN BRIDGE COMPANY, OF CHICAGO, ILL.

L. B. BOOMER, of Chicago, President. (ORGANIZED AUG. 1, 1872.)

AUTHORIZED CAPITAL STOCK, $1,000,000

The whole amount of the authorized Capital Stock of this Company not having been issued, the balance thereof will be issued to subscribers of par, payments for same to be made in four installments of 25 per cent. each, viz.:

25 PER CENT. JULY 15, 1872.
25 PER CENT. AUG. 1, 1872.
25 PER CENT. SEPT. 1, 1872.
25 PER CENT. OCT. 1, 1872.

The Subscription Books now open at the office of the undersigned, will be closed as soon as the new stock is fully subscribed. All past-due installments must be paid with interest at time of subscription.

The total amount of stock issued at this time is $414,700, and on this basis the Company shows a present surplus of $136,980 97, and is now doing a flourishing business. (Six thousand men are constantly employed in their extensive works, and they now have on hand $1,250,000 of work for various railroads in the United States, among which may be mentioned the:

CHICAGO, R. I. & PACIFIC,
CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN,
MICHIGAN CENTRAL,
MISSOURI PACIFIC,
ATLANTIC & PACIFIC, &c.

and the Company is now offered work to the amount of over $2,000,000, including some of the largest bridges ever built in this country, to accept of which, and further business, necessitates a larger working capital, as immense amounts of material have to be kept constantly on hand, and the Company are freely offered the best of terms for payment for their work, refunded and other bonds, which are perfectly good securities, but not always immediately marketable.

A point of incidental but great importance to those seeking security is the fact that the Company own thirty acres of land in Chicago, which, leading real estate dealers say will be worth, in six years, at least $1,000,000—an amount equal to the whole proposed capital.

The success of the American Bridge Company, though brief, has already fully demonstrated the profitable character of the enterprise. The Company has constructed since its organization, and up to the 31st of December, 1871, a total of 3,127 feet of bridges, 15 turning tables, and 16 iron roofs, and pneumatic and other pipe; have the machinery, tools, and facilities, and have facilities for the construction of pneumatic piles unsurpassed by any Company in the country, and a capacity for the construction of at least 150 feet of bridge per day, or 45,000 feet per year.

The Iron Railroad and Highway Bridge at Leavenworth, of three spans of 365 feet each, and the Union Pacific Bridge across the Missouri River, of eleven spans of 250 feet each, were constructed by this Company.

The net profit arising from this business, as shown by the books of the Company up to the 31st of March, 1872, was the sum of $373,489 14, or at the rate of $224,093 48 per annum, or over 50 per cent. upon the capital stock then outstanding. With the proposed new structures, machinery, &c., the Company will have much greater capacity, and the profits of the business will be much more. It shall then be duly authorized and directed to pay a dividend of twenty (20) cents on the dollar of the debts of the late Atlantic Fire Insurance Company, which have been ascertained and adjusted, by the persons who have exhibited their claims as creditors of said Company, as prescribed in and by section 70, creation, chapter 1, title 4, part 3 of the Revised Statutes. It is further ordered and decreed that a notice be published, in the manner hereinafter directed, requiring all the creditors of the said Atlantic Fire Insurance Company to exhibit their claims, and become parties to the above-entitled suit, within six months from the first publication of this order; and, in default thereof, that they be precluded from all benefit of the judgment and decree which shall be made thereon, and from any distribution which shall be made under said judgment or decree. And it is further ordered that said notice and a copy of this order be published once a week for six months in the New-York Daily Times, a newspaper published in the City of New-York, and the Daily Eagle, a newspaper published in the City of Brooklyn. And it is further ordered that Clarence L. Burnett, a counselor of this Court, be and he is hereby appointed referee in the above-entitled suit, to receive such publication, be made under his direction, and that all such claims as exhibited to the said referee. That said referee do hear and determine all such claims as may be presented to him, and report to this Court, from time to time, upon all or any matters referred to him. And that said referee be at liberty to apply to this Court for such further directions from time to time as may be proper.

FOR BOYS—SUPERIOR ADVANTAGES AT Riverview Academy, Poughkeeps

THE ELEVENTH PICNIC.

Extraordinary Rush of Girls and Boys Yesterday.

Over Fourteen Hundred Enjoying the Holiday.

The excursion yesterday proved a decided success, and the number of children participating was larger than on any previous occasion, being over 1,400. The mothers, and other adults present, made the aggregate 1,570 persons, who were all liberally fed and given a day of genuine enjoyment. The demand for excursion tickets became so large and earnest one. The children were all happy and behaved remarkably well.

The sum of $12 65 was received yesterday for the fund. As the excursion barge passed Whitehall-slip yesterday morning the Customs officers gave the boys and girls a vigorous salute. They subsequently subscribed $10 toward the Fund, as follows: John Laird, $1; Joseph Folsar, $1; Henry Walds, $1; Levi Grosvenor, $1; William Weaver, $1; Daniel Sullivan, $1; Robert T. Cross, $1; Edward Dennis, $1; E. L. M. Baldwin, $1, and G. Arrowsmith, $1. "Les" sends $1. The guests of the Rogers House, Catskills, send $1 65. These contributors make the aggregate of the Fund to date, $12,445 57. The contributions acknowledged yesterday, as from N., $25; N. B., $20; N. J., $15; F., $10, and F. L., $2, should be placed to the credit of the sick poor. The $10 credited yesterday to the Reformed Church, Greenfield, should have been "Greenville."

Yesterday's Excursion.

The eleventh excursion for children, given in honor of the employes of H. B. Claflin & Co., took place yesterday, and was the largest party that has as yet been taken out. There were 1,439 children, 102 mothers and fifty-nine teachers, which made altogether over 1,600 persons. As H. B. Claflin's establishment is in the Fifth Ward, a large proportion of the children was gathered there by the visitors of St. John's Guild, the remainder being taken from the Eighth, Eleventh and Thirteenth Wards. The children were embarked on the barge Anna—the first party several hundred strong—shortly after 7 o'clock, at the foot of Christopher-street, whence the vessel was towed by the tug E. Doane, Capt. Purcell, to the foot of Franklin-street, where over 500 more children, besides some grown persons, were taken on board.

The barge was then towed around by the Battery to the East River, and, while passing the barge office, received a salute from the persons encamped in the building, from the vessels in the Bay, and also from several persons who had assembled at the Battery. The Anna then proceeded up the East River to East Eighth-street pier. The children waiting there numbered over 400, and were collected from the Thirteenth Ward, by Mr. George Calder, and from the Eleventh Ward, by Mr. S. Lovell. At this point the Governor's Island band was also taken on board.

The character of the assemblage was as motley as could well be imagined. Some were children neatly dressed, and some with scarcely a sound article of clothing; some with hats and boots, and quite as many without. Some few were lame, and many deformed, and not a few were colored. One whole family of colored persons came from the Fifth Ward. One woman of the party had on as antiquated shawl, a skirt of a dress, and an old bonnet, and evidently had neither shoe or stocking. She had three children with her, very little better clothed than herself. There was also a woman who had been found by Miss Richardson, a sailor, in a cellar, which had been her habitation for five years, during which time she had never left the City or even visited Central Park. "Do you really mean to take me, Miss, that you will send me into the country for a day?" "Yes," was the reply; "if you will go." "Go!" she ejaculated; "of course I'll go, and glad of the chance." At the end of the excursion she gratefully expressed her thanks. There was also the usual quantity of street boys, who seemed as happy as any.

Soon after the barge had left the Eighth-street pier, preparations were made for breakfast, and every person received a sandwich and a cup of iced milk. The mothers with infants were first attended to, next the girls and small boys, and afterward the larger boys.

The excursionists arrived at Orient Grove at about 1 o'clock, but, before disembarking, sandwiches were served out, each person taking his or her share on shore.

In the Grove the children were amused with the Punch and Judy, which now seems to be as much desired by them as ice-cream.

The boys made for the water as if it were their native element. In a few moments the surface of the water was alive with bathers; but none were allowed to go beyond their depth, the life-boat driving in all who ventured beyond the prescribed limits. While the boys were thus engaged, the girls and young gentlemen were satisfied with the attendance, and strolled in the Grove, and amused themselves gathering wild flowers and trailing vines, which they brought back to the City.

Before re-embarkation each child received a large piece of cake and a cup of lemonade, after which the little ones were sent on the upper deck of the barge, each one receiving a ticket for ice-cream, to prevent any of the children from being left behind, not only was the whistle of the tug sounded a number of times, but the Manager, teachers and Police officers went into the Grove and cleared it in a systematic manner.

The trip back was very delightful, a cooler breeze having sprung up. After all the children had been served with their ice-cream, they were amused with various games on both decks of the barge.

During the return the party was saluted by the yacht Marianna, whose commander, Capt. Kidd, Commodore of the Harlem Yacht Club, dipped his ensign three times in salute. This was answered with cheers from the boys and three whistles from the Doane. Salutes were received and answered from the steamers Continental, Nelly White, Old Colony, Escort, D. R. Martyn, City of New-York, Seawanhaka, City of Hartford, E. H. Webster, Port Royal, Sylvan Stream, Gladiator, Sylvan Dell and others, music including the Continental, cutter off Whitehall, the Hell Gate pilot-boat No. 4, the yacht Thomas Howard, of Philadelphia, and others.

The east side party was landed on the return at Eighth-street, and the remainder taken round the Battery to Franklin and Christopher streets, from which points the children went joyfully to their homes.

The TIMES' staff was greatly assisted during the day by Rev. A. Wiswall, Master of St. John's Guild; Dr. Thoms, of the New-York Nautical School; Dr. Thurman, of Madison-avenue; Mr. Parvin, Mr. J. C. Eastman, and the following ladies and gentlemen: Meadames Parvin, Taylor and Stephens, Misses Jones, Robinson, Roberts, Rollins, Waldron, Kimmins, Richardson and Hill; Messrs. C. L. Cooke, Matthews, Bowers, Cook, Burby, Pollard, C. Quinn, R. Quinn, J. and R. Johnston, all of St. John's Guild; Rev. E. M. Sonnlitz, Messrs. J. Hill, C. H. Daniels, W. Howland, Moses M. Richardson, Montgomery, A. E. Chandler and others. The following officers assisted in preserving order: Patrolmen Robinson, Church, Jones, Stack, Hinghausen and Mitchell, all of the Seventeenth Precinct.

Commerce of the Pacific.

From the Minneapolis Tribune.

Some weeks ago we gave, in these columns, a notice of one of the most admirable enterprises of the day, which was as original and happy in its conception as it has proved to be thoroughly successful in its carrying out. This was the undertaking on the part of certain persons in New-York to provide for the many as could be reached of the poor, wretched children of Mulberry-street, Corlear's Hook, the Five Points and other of the lowest quarters of the City, certain excursions, picnics, bathing parties and other such similar arrangements for a day's pleasure as could be carried out within the limits of a tolerably limited expenditure.

The movement was endorsed by some thoughtful persons who were with the New-York Daily TIMES, and did much to bring it before the public in the columns of that influential journal, accompanied by manuals to that same purpose for earnest women, was responded to with the generous response which the American people ever show to such a case. One of the most surprising things about the matter was the fact that a humble and powerful newspaper, in the heat and hurry of one of the most important political campaigns that has ever excited our country, should find thought to conceive, and time and energy to carry into execution, one of the most truly noble schemes of unpretending benevolence ever put into operation in this or any other country. The Press of the country is unanimous in its hearty praise of the enterprise and its managers.

The South Bend (Ind.) Tribune.

The NEW-YORK TIMES showed the power of a great newspaper in appealing to men's rights, when it caused the overthrow of Tammany, and it is again showing its power in another direction in appealing to men's sympathies for the amelioration of the poor children of New-York. The appeal was made a few weeks ago, and the TIMES has received over $12,000, ten thousand dollars of which it has given away to the poor children's fund. Thus a great paper, like the TIMES, while waging war against the corruptionists of New-York City, and bearing the brunt of the battle of Republicanism against Democracy, can find time to send its reporters into the lowest purlieus of the City and give its poorest poor children recreation, is one of the grandest acts we have recorded.

BASE-BALL.

Another Boston Success—The Atlantics Defeated by 13 to 6.

Probably a less interesting game than that yesterday, between the Atlantics and Bostons, has not been played anywhere this season. Good plays were rather the exception than rule with the visitors, while the muffing of Beavans, on the side of the Atlantics, was simply unparalleled. The game began well for the Atlantics, two earned runs being scored by them in the first inning, the Bostons in turn getting a single and that through two fearful errors by Beavans, who, after giving the Bostons six runs in the second inning, was changed to short stop, where he was somewhat more of a success, yet by no means perfect. The Atlantics' play improved as the game proceeded, but the lead obtained by their opponents on the second inning was too great to be overcome, and the former left the field defeated by a score of 12 to 6, and by a nine which can now fairly lay claim to the distinction of having in its ranks the most perfect short-stop game that has ever taken place in this country. Schafer and Barnes appear to be the only really reliable men in the nine. Geo. Wright's fielding as short stop being now far below the average of other professionals occupying that position, while at all the other points of play, with perhaps the exception of Rogers, frequently take a hand in muffinism. With the exceptions noted the Atlantics fielded fairly yesterday, Ferguson, Dehlman and Remsen taking the lead. In Mr. Allison was developed a very unmoving umpire, several of his decisions being inexcusably contested, and in more instances against the Atlantics. About 1,000 spectators attended—an excellent audience considering the short notice and the exaction of a fifty-cent tariff, the Bostons declining the proposal for a reasonable price of admission.

NOTES.

The Maple Leaf Club, of Guelph, Canada, will visit the Metropolitan today, on their tour through the States, where they propose trying conclusions with Eastern experts. The Maple Leafs distinguished themselves by a victory over the Baltimores some two months ago, and today they encounter the Mutuals on the Union Ground.

The Athletics play the Atlantics on the Capitoline to-morrow, and the Mutuals on Saturday at the Union Ground.

The New Shipping Act—The Case of the Captured Runners—Business at the Exchange.

Edward Bennett and John Horan, the sailor-boarding-house runners who were arrested on Tuesday evening, for boarding a German vessel in violation of sections 62 and 63 of the new shipping law, reappeared before Commissioner Shields yesterday and, waiving an examination, were held in $500 bail each to await the action of the Grand Jury. The sailor landlords threaten to make this a "test case," but it is unlikely that there will be any combination in the matter, as the landlords are very busy now in drumming up legitimate trade, which is generally at this season dull enough. The majority are, after a great scare, anxious to make friends with the Commissioner. So far as the shipping agents are concerned, all idea of opposition has been abandoned, and many of the better class are assisting in carrying out the law by acting as deputies under the supervision of the Commissioners—a step which, in the instance, was at first opposed by certain of the more experienced shippers. During the week business has been exceedingly brisk at the Exchange in Cherry-street, which since the new act came into effect, has become the sole head-quarters for seamen while in the City. Yesterday nearly 200 men were provided with berths and six crews paid off.

The Tax Report.

To the Commissioners of Taxes and Assessments:

GENTLEMEN: In today's papers I find a communication from you, in which you state that a grave error exists in the report published in reference to the assessment of the Harlem Railroad Depot. I desire to state that I shall at once give the subject my earnest attention; and if any error has crept into the report, (of which that part published in the daily papers was a mere extract,) I shall endeavor to give the same as wide a publication as the extract from the report has received. I also desire to state, that the measure as you have tried by your report of this morning to make it appear, as though this subject (personal taxes) had been before fully ventilated, that the "straw" has not been "thrashed" to the satisfaction of the tax-payers of this City; and I shall try to prove to the public at large that monopolies, especially railroad corporations, have escaped paying personal taxes, through your accepting statements which show fraud on their very face.

Respectfully yours, FRANCIS J. GEIS,
Chairman Law Committee Board of Assistant Aldermen.

NEW-YORK, Aug. 14, 1872.

Arrest of Private Detectives.

Nathan King and Edward T. Cox, private detectives, composing the firm of King & Cox, having an office at No. 73 Broadway, were arrested by Capt. James Irving and Detective Karns, at the Central Office, on a warrant granted by Justice Hogan, in which they stand charged with the larceny of $1,000 worth of jewelry and silver-ware, the property of Mr. Mary Hoyt, a widow, residing at No. 1,176 Atlantic-avenue, Brooklyn. The complainant alleges that on or about the 21st of February last, she was induced by the accused to give in their charge for safe-keeping the property mentioned above; and though since that time she had repeatedly made demands for the return of her property, she has never succeeded in obtaining possession. King was arrested at his office, and Cox was captured at his residence in West Forty-eighth-street. They were both locked up in Police Head-quarters, and will be arraigned at the Tombs for examination today.

RATIFICATION MEETING.

Grand Demonstration in Williamsburg—The Fifteenth Ward for Grant.

The Republicans of the Fifteenth Ward of Williamsburg held their opening campaign meeting in their new wigwam, at the corner of Grand and Leonard streets, last evening. It was feared that the excessive heat of the weather would diminish the attendance, but long before the hour for opening the wigwam was densely packed, and the streets for a long distance either way were thronged with people who were unable to obtain admission to the crowded hall. A full band had been provided and national and popular airs were discoursed at intervals, until a late hour in the evening. Sky-rockets, Roman-candles and fire-works of every description were shot off in abundance. Stands were provided for out-door speakers, and the crowds about each were large and enthusiastic. The remarks of the orators were listened to with marked attention, and in no instance did any interruption occur to mar the harmony of the occasion. Late in the evening the Grant and Wilson Campaign Club, of the Eighteenth Ward, marched from head-quarters to the mass-meeting, 200 strong, with banners and transparencies. A cannon belonging to the organization was also taken along, and twenty-five guns fired in honor of the occasion. The wigwam was large and capacious, and bore the inscription "The Fifteenth Ward Grant and Wilson Campaign Club. Grant never was beaten, and he never will be beaten.—Horace Greeley"—over the entrance.

The interior was profusely decorated with banners and appropriate inscriptions.

The meeting was organized by the election of George W. Sparrow as President, and the following gentlemen as Vice-Presidents and Secretaries:

Vice-Presidents—David Marvin, Charles Schmann, Harvey W. Peace, Stephen J. Burrows, John Snyder, Charles Adams, John T. Parker, Robert Bonner, Charles Schriemkardt, Edward Mipon, William Lugden, Robert Ferguson, Charles M. Church, Jacob Statts, Robert Spitzer, George Hull, Isaac Tillotson, Charles Neidig, Daniel R. Latham, Elijah Cabble, Jos. C. Cabble.

Secretaries.—Edwin D. Buckman, John H. Reed, Christian Yeadin, Robert Hendrickson, Richard L. Burt, John Fleming, Charles Tyler, Samuel Trebout.

The following resolutions were then passed unanimously:

Resolved, That by these ceremonies we dedicate this building to the service of true Republicanism, represented by the noble and worthy name of the illustrious names of Ulysses S. Grant and Henry Wilson.

Resolved, That we believe there is as much vitality in the principles of the Republican Party embodied in the Philadelphia platform, as at any time in the past.

Resolved, That our party history and administration of the national government, such as we heartily to commend us to the favor and support of the people.

Resolved, That we behold in the successes which have attended the opening of the Grant campaign omens of another and grander victory as the culminating result of the November election.

Soloman Spitzer, Esq., was then introduced to the meeting, and after congratulating the Republicans of the Fifteenth Ward upon the success which had attended their efforts so far in the campaign, he followed in a stirring address in favor of Grant and Wilson, and urged the necessity of supporting the present Administration.

Gov. Jewell, of Connecticut, followed with an earnest, pithy and eloquent address, in which he spoke of the false position of Horace Greeley, of his vacillation, weakness and general unfitness to occupy the Presidential chair; of the eagerness of Mr. Greeley to attain office, and his incompetency to perform the duties appertaining thereto. He spoke of the visit of the Democratic nominee to New-Hampshire, of the hopes raised in his breast which will surely come to grief. The speaker reviled in pertinent language Grant in the way friends depicted the baseness, hypocrisy and venality of the Democratic Party, and the foolish infatuation of its chief expoent.

Gov. Jewell closed with a call for three cheers for the Republican nominees, Grant and Wilson. These were given with a will, the entire audience rising and showing enthusiastically in response. Three cheers were then given for Gov. Jewell.

Col. Tourge followed in a correct address in favor of the present Administration. He alluded to its course for the past four years, and said that, viewing the acts of President Grant in any light, whatever, and every charge that could be adduced against them. By his wise, firm and economical policy he has succeeded in placing the finances and credit of the country upon a firm, enduring basis, and has gained for our land both prosperity at home and honor abroad.

Mr. Van Riper, of Jersey City, also spoke strongly in favor of the Administration.

The meeting closed at a late hour, the immense crowds hardly diminishing until the last words were spoken. It will be regarded as the largest and most enthusiastic political meeting ever held in the Fifteenth Ward.

Greeleyism in Westchester.

The Liberal Republicans of Westchester County in favor of the election of Horace Greeley for President and B. Gratz Brown for Vice-President held a Convention at Carpenter's Orswampum Hotel, White Plains, yesterday afternoon, for the purpose of organizing a County Committee and adopting such measures as might seem expedient to secure the success of their candidates.

Hon. Silas D. Gifford, County Judge, called the meeting to order, and on his motion Hon. E. F. Shonnard, of Yonkers, was chosen Chairman.

Joseph F. Swords, of West Farms, and E. P. Ferris, of White Plains, were appointed Secretaries.

The delegates from the towns of the county were then called in alphabetical order for their respective lists of delegates to the Convention, which were handed in and recorded. Harvey Kidd, of West Chester, moved that the Chair appoint a County Committee, consisting of one member from each town.

It was finally decided that each town should be represented in the County Committee by two members, and the following gentlemen were selected, viz.:

Bedford—Zephar Carpenter, A. J. Carpenter. Cortlandt—Thomas Nelson, Dennis Hill. East Chester—David Dows, S. T. Jennings. Greenburgh—Hiram Hunter, Jacob Hoyt. Mamaroneck—Jas. Tompkins, D. A. Haviland. Morrisania—Gustav Levy, Dr. H. Heywood. Mount Pleasant—D. S. Howe, E. J. Carpenter. New-Castle—E. R. Lane, F. M. Carpenter. New-Rochelle—Geo. Jackson, Jas. Carpenter. Lewisboro—Erastus C. Bouton, Cyrus Lawrence. North Castle—Leander Baker, Edwin Hopkins. North Salem—Erastus Fitch, Gilbert Bailey. Ossining—E. A. Ackerman, Jas. Requard. Pelham—Noah Tompkins; Scarsdale—George Weaver, Somers—Cyrus Turner, John Owens. West Chester—Harvey Kidd, A. H. Cooke. West Farms—J. F. Swords, Andrew Crawitz. White Plains—Lewis O. Tibbits, Jas. Requard. Yorktown—Jas. Requard, Alex. McMahon; Yorktown—James H. Curry, Wm. Beak.

It was finally left optional with the delegates from each Assembly District, to select delegates to the State Convention or leave it for the whole one to choose their own delegates. The delegates from the First Assembly District selected Hon. W. W. Niles, Judge S. D. Gifford and Hon. E. F. Shonnard, with Harvey Kidd, Gustave Levy and S. E. Getty as alternates.

The delegates from the Second Assembly District selected Hon. E. J. Porter, Lewis C. Platt and Theodore B. Stevens as delegates to State Convention, with John Swinborne, Samuel T. Jennings and John R. Stewart as alternates.

The gentlemen representing the towns of the Third Assembly District deemed it inexpedient to select delegates to the State Convention, but appointed a committee to call a District Convention, to be held at Pine's Bridge on the 28th inst., for the purpose of choosing delegates to the State Convention.

Mr. Nelson H. Baker offered the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted by the Convention, viz.:

Resolved, That we, the Liberal Republicans of the County of Westchester, in Convention assembled, indorse the nomination of Horace Greeley and B. Gratz Brown, for President and Vice-President of the United States, and pledge to them our united support.

Resolved, That in the coming election we will support such candidates for State and local officers as are known to be favorable to the election of the candidates, and of the principles enunciated in the platform of the Cincinnati Convention.

Resolved, That we are in favor of a fusion of all the opponents of the National Administration.

On motion, Francis Larkins was requested by the Convention to act as temporary Chairman in calling the County Committee together.

Excursion by the Anchor Steam-Ship Company.

An excursion was given yesterday on board the Calcutania by Messrs. Henderson, proprietors of the Anchor line of steam-ships, to the American agents of the Company. The steamer left her dock, Pier No. 20 North River, at 10 o'clock A. M., having on board about 500 persons. On leaving the dock, Gratzka's celebrated Bohemian Band, which was on board, played the Star-Spangled Banner and Save the Queen, and while in the Bay several rounds dipped their flags in reply to the salute of the Gallatin. Dancing took place, and Bach's performance, several pieces, and Mary Clelland and Rankin, who were in Highland costume, favored the guests with music by the bagpipes. The California steamer down the Bay, and went as far as Long Branch, unceasing firing several guns, returned to New-York. On the return voyage, the guests were invited to partake of an excellent dinner, which the Company had provided. In consequence of the large number present, the second deck, amidships, was turned into a large dining saloon, and here the guests did ample justice to the bountiful supply of viands which loaded the tables. After dinner, the popping of champagne corks announced that the festivities had not concluded, and Mr. Holbrook, the agent of Messrs. Henderson Brothers, then took the chair, and a number of toasts were drank, amid great enthusiasm.

By 7:15 P. M. the steamer was safely docked, and the guests proceeded for their homes, well pleased with the excursion and the creditable manner in which the programme was carried out. Among the gentlemen present, who devoted their time to making the guests comfortable, were Mr. McDonald, Mr. Lamont, Capt. Owen, and the officers of the ship. Not a single instance of any unpleasantness occurred during the day to mar the pleasure of the excursion. On leaving the steam-ship, the guests gave three ringing cheers for the Anchor line and for the good steam-ship California.

BOATING.

Regatta of the Atalanta Boat Club—An Interesting Day's Sport Yesterday.

The Atalanta Boat Club is the oldest organization of its kind on our waters, and their regattas and club entertainments are always noted for good management and the pleasure to be derived therefrom. The boat-houses at the foot of Christopher-street, yesterday, were tastefully decorated with flying tunning, and the boys, in their club uniforms, were busy as bees getting their boats in order and lowering them into the water. The ladies went about prying into the mysteries of the boating institution, asking a thousand questions each, frequently alluding to the time when they were permitted to share the honors and pleasures of the rowers. The steamer P. C. Schmitz, lashed to the commodious barge Republic, laid at the dock foot of Christopher-street, and strains of sweet harmony discoursed by Wallace's band, lent additional enchantment to the scene. At about 2 o'clock the lines were cast off, and the steamer and barge moved out into the stream. The Club's barges, three eight-oared and two four-oared, were here taken in tow, and all headed up stream, bound for the course at Pleasant Valley. When off Thirty-fourth-street, the yacht Commodore joined the excursion, with Commodore George Roehr and a party of friends on board. Several club boats were also on their way up, and many single and double scull boats. The barge was left at anchor midway on the course, and the steamer landed the crews and boats at the dock. The first race, three miles, with a turn, for the senior scull championship of the club, rowed in shells, was called about 4 o'clock. The entries were Eben Losee and John C. O'Neil; they got a good send off, but Losee soon drew away from O'Neil, increasing the gap to and around the stake-boat, rowing to the finish as he pleased, and winning the race in 25 minutes 50 seconds, this being the third consecutive year that he wins the champion belt of the Club.

The second race, three miles, with a turn, for the junior scull championship of the Club, in seventeen-foot race boats, brought out George Young and Samuel Clark. The start was as fair as could be desired, but this race was totally devoid of interest, as Young took the lead at once, and opened a big gap between himself and his opponent, rowing over the course without a competitor; Clark, who rowed miserably, withdrawing after rowing about three-fourths of a mile. Mr. A. H. Dupignac gave Young a brush on the homestretch, and infused a little interest into this rather tame affair. Young's time—25 minutes and 13½ seconds—was better than Losee's time in the senior race.

The third race, two miles with a turn, was started at 5:40 o'clock, three eight-oared barges competing. Barge Columbia, Crew: W. A. Knapp, bow; W. C. Maitland, J. T. Fryer, Edward Wills, John Lindsey, Charles Earwicker, J. C. O'Neil, Alexander Handy, stroke; John King, coxswain. Colors blue. This boat got inside position, near the shore. Barge Atalanta—Crew: George Young, bow; George Ackerson, S. Van Zandt, James Watson, George Springsteen, Sam. Clark, J. Silkman, Russell Withers, stroke; Eben Losee, coxswain; colors, crimson; centre position. Barge Hudson—Crew: Alden B. Swan, bow; Henry Handy, Wash. Haddock, M. B. Cox, F. H. Clark, Charles Zachman, Chas. S. Adams, Sheehers Van Zandt, stroke; George Roehr, coxswain; colors white; position outside, in the stream. The boats got away at hour, any material advantage, but it was soon apparent that the race laid between the blue and crimson, as the white gradually dropped astern, the two others struggling hard for the lead, which was finally obtained by the blues, who held it to the finish, the crimson lapping and running outside of them, by which they gained somewhat, as the tide was running the last of flood and was stronger in midstream. A good race ensued on the homestretch between the blue and crimson, the whites being virtually out of the race; there was a gap of two lengths between the crimson and blues at one time, but the former shot it up before the terminus was reached, the blues winning the race in 17 minutes, with the crimson close on their stern.

The fourth race, also two miles, with a turn, was between two four-oared barges, manned respectively by married and single members of the club. Barge Excelsior—Married crew: Alden B. Swan, bow; S. Van Zandt, Alexander Henry, Theodore Van Zandt, stroke; George Roehr, coxswain; colors, crimson. Barge Volante—Single crew: John C. O'Neil, bow; George Springsteen, John Lindsey, Russell Withers, stroke; Eben Losee, coxswain; colors, white. They got the word at 6:43, and both crews got away fairly and handsomely, but the married men went to the front within a furlong of the start, and at this stage of the race a pretty heavy shower came up and drenched all those exposed. The married men pulled well, and reached the stake first, the single men turning inside of them; the married men, however, went steadily to work, and put two lengths between the boats, winning the race in 14 minutes.

There were many other Club boats on the course, among them the Gulick's eight-oared barge, Gramercy's gig, Manhattan Club gig, double-scull of the Atlantics. Also, in single scull shells, race and working-boats, John W. Brownlee, Ed Blake, Dick Bryson, J. H. Kobbe and other of the Atlantics; A. J. Dupignac, of the Atlantics; Dave Roach and Mike Byrom, from the Harlem River. The handsome yacht Coquette was also on the course with a party of ladies, and many other boats and persons too numerous to mention. All the clubs in this section of the country were represented—Gramercy, Nassau, Nassau Gulick, Waveley, Atlantic, Sappho, Dauntless, Mutual Neptune and others. As soon as the boats and crews could be got together after the last race, the steamer took all the rest in tow, arriving at Christopher-street a little after 9 o'clock. Mr. Peverelly presented the prizes to the victors in a neat and appropriate address. Everyone returned home well pleased with the sports of the day.

Dr. Russell Withers started the first two races and Mr. G. F. Busselle the two barge races. Mr. Charles A. Peverelly officiated as referee.

MEXICO.

The New Railroad Project—Surveyors Reach Mazatlan—Diaz Said to be About to Lay Down His Arms.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 14.—The engineering party dispatched from Mexico, via San Luis, Guadalajara and San Blas by Gens. Rosecrans and Palmer, to make the preliminary surveys for the new railroad, arrived at Mazatlan safely, passing through the lines of the rebels under Diaz, without molestation. They report that the people everywhere are favorable to the enterprise. The party will return via Durango, Zacatecas, Aguas, Calientes and Queretaro to the City of Mexico. Diaz was at Culiacan on the 7th of August, with 500 men, and had 200 more between Topic and Mazatlan, but was not able to attack the latter post.

An official dispatch from Mazatlan says that Gen. Diaz has decided to lay down his arms and accept the amnesty, which act finally closes the rebellion in Mexico.

THE INDIANS.

The Outbreak in Utah Serious—Troops to be Sent to the Scene.

SALT LAKE CITY, Aug. 14.—The Indian troubles at San Pete are serious. Tabby, a well-known Indian Chief, sends word to all the Bishops that he cannot longer control his tribe. A dispatch to Agent Dodge says that the Indians are stealing horses and killing men at every opportunity. Gov. Woods, last night, made a requisition on Gen. Morrow for troops, which will immediately be hurried forward to the scene of the outbreak.
